

DISTRESS IN ENGLAND.

The Coal Crisis in England Great Soil depression—but the Pitt House
Enjoys the Best.

It is a fact that the coal crisis in England is a very serious one. The coal mines are closed, and the people are suffering from the lack of fuel. The government has taken steps to relieve the situation, but the crisis is still very serious.

Brother Walter W. Williams, of the Twenty-first ward, Salt Lake City, writes me concerning an amusing incident which occurred at a place called Hild, in the North-western States. The Wesleyans were holding an annual meeting on one of the main streets in that town. During the meeting the minister inquired of Brother Williams (who happened to be present) if he had ever assisted at an outdoor meeting. He replied in the affirmative. The minister then mentioned to the large audience that they would be addressed by a stranger. At the commencement of Brother Williams' remarks the members of the church religiously long manifested signs of appreciation, but when he produced proof in favor of the principle of baptism being essential to salvation they showed signs of disapproval. Truly faithful were the members of the church when they saw the minister's remarks.

When the minister mentioned that it was his intention to baptize the converts, they showed signs of disapproval. Truly faithful were the members of the church when they saw the minister's remarks.
