AMERICA THE CHOSEN LAND

Its Discovery and Dedication to Liberty Not the Result of Accident.

ADDRESS BY ELDER WHITNEY.

George Washington, Said the Speaker, Was One of the Greatest Characters The World Has Produced.

The discovery of America, its deliverance from oppression and dedication to liberty, and the subsequent restoration of the gospel of the Son of God upon its sacred soil, formed the theme of an interesting discourse by Elder Orson F. Whitney, of the council of the apostles, at the tabernacle, yesterday afternoon. There was a very large congregation in attendance, and the speaker held the closest attention of his auditors.

"Lord, Thou wilt hear me when I pray," "Praise the Lord all ye nations," and "The mountains of the Lord's house" were the selections for the choir. Elder Hamilton G. Park and Joseph S. Wells offered the opening and closing prayers, the services being conducted by President John R. Winder.

ELDER O. F. WHITNEY.

Following is a brief synopsis of Elder Whitney's remarks: Yesterday marked the anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the father of whom it was said that Providence left him childless that he might become the father of his country. Washington might have become a king, had he so willed, but when he had reformed his duty as he saw it, he preferred going into retirement from public life. He was one of the greatest characters the world has produced, and this because of his goodness of heart and integrity of soul. Possessed of no large measure of genius, Washington was yet the country's foremost patriot. "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." He was great because humble, patient and enduring. His patience was equal to that of Columbus, his courage and fortitude surpassed by none.

The worth of Washington is appreciated by none more than by the Latter-day Saints. His character and achievements fill a niche in the great scheme of the gospel plan, the aims and purposes of which are the gathering of Israel, man's temporal and spiritual salvation and the redemption of this planet.

EVENTS FORESEEN.

One of the ancient prophets who lived on this continent was permitted to look into the future and foresee many of the happenings of the western world. Some of these are recited in 1 Nephi. The attention of the congregation was called to the fact that as man advanced in civilization he reached after the higher in the divine art.

Washington achieved success because God was with him. With an incomparable congress behind him and with a host of valiant soldiers, he prevailed against the most powerful nation of modern times, winning the homage of the civilized world. Washington had not only the Declaration of Independence as did Jefferson, nor drafted the Constitution as did Hamilton and his colleagues. His were the talents of a statesman, the wisdom of a philosopher, the courage of a hero, the patience of a saint, and the endurance of a giant. He was a man of many parts, and his achievements came because of unassured opportunity, while a greater genius, Robert E. Lee, failed because of his lack. Not the least of Grant's greatness was his main aim in war was to win peace. Many great men have lived and died in obscurity, because opportunity came their way. Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing is so common as to see the white others are little noticed or totally ignored.

The Latter-day Saints deem themselves not inconsistent nor egotistical in declaring that Joseph Smith was worthy to be considered equal with Columbus and Washington. Upon the boy prophet, as upon the great discoverer and the famous soldier, had a time rested the burden of the consummation of God's purposes relative to the new world. By his faith, patience and endurance was the latter gospel dispensation ushered in, by the same qualities this land was uncovered and made the home of freedom and liberty.

INTERESTING DOCUMENT

Lawyer of This City Has Precious Paper, Found Among His Father's Effects.

About a year ago there died in Provo, Utah, an old man by the name of J. W. Warner. His wife had passed away a short time before and after a long life enjoyed by both always together he went without complaining. Of those who remained Judge M. M. Warner, a son, lives in this city, and a brother in Provo. While going through their father's effects the late son found among a piece of paper, folded many times, but fairly well preserved. It was found to be a payroll sheet made out by the father at the time he was a captain in the Iowa volunteers early in the Civil war. The document is now framed and hangs in Judge Warner's office in this city. That he treasures it is unnecessary to explain. Today he told the story of its discovery.

DESERET EVENING

very and what it means to him. "When father enlisted I was just a little chap; the smallest boy in the family," he began. "I remember of hearing about the war and watching the young men and big boys of our little town, Leon, Decatur county, Iowa, drilling to the tattoo of an old drum. Finally father went away and in command of Company M, Third regiment, Iowa volunteer cavalry. We kids formed companies and marched to the noise of an old drum. On the day father and the boys marched away I remember the women crying. My brother and I knew mother cried because father was going and that another woman cried because her son or brother was going away, but we remember wondering why certain young girls cried. Of course, it came on afterwards.

"One of our students I remember in connection with the trip, father and his company made from Keokuk to Benton Barracks, Mo., led to a court-martial. The company was ordered to the front just as an epidemic of measles was abroad. Many of the younger members of the company were young boys and father had promised to take them with him. So an effort was made to leave the company at Leon. The surgeon said the boys would be all right by the time the measles reached them. They were warm during the trip, so all boarded the Jeanne Dean, a river steamer. It started to rain so father decided the boys would have to be taken in from the open decks. But where? A number of lords and dukes from England were going to the front and they had paid big money for state and cabin rooms. The captain refused to ask them to yield their rooms so father put him under arrest; took charge of the boat; fired the nobility out and put his own sick men in their cozy quarters. I said, he was court-martialed but exonerated completely when the facts came out."

The late J. W. Warner came to Utah about six years ago for his health. He resigned as judge of the probate court at Buena Vista, Col., to come here. He was also state senator from Chaffee county, Iowa, when the constitution of that state was drawn up, he taking an active part in this step. The pay roll shows 100 men to a company at that time and 10 companies were in the line. At the present time, war calls for 100 men to a troop of cavalry and 12 troops to the regiment. The document covers the month between Oct. 31, and Dec. 31, 1861, and shows that the company were 91 men in service through the month.

In November last the cough again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was, indeed, marvelous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared, and has not manifested itself since. This remedy is for sale by all druggists."
