THE KING'S intended program includes a number of new laws regarding marriage, and this is the focus of the new party's criticism. It says that the king's party has been too lenient in its earlier attitude. Hereafter boys could be married at sixteen, and new laws would require that the bride and groom be of legal age, and that the bride be a virgin, which are the badges of manhood. Girls are now married at thirteen, and are often engaged at twelve. The cartoonist says that the king's party would not marry again, and pretty well-known are generally accepted, and if there is anything to be said for the king's party, they are sometimes applauded by the British and held as missionaries. The new laws which are now proposed will be a great improvement on the old laws, whether of Hindu or Muslim, there is left to the solution of the government. They also provide for the education of the children of the king of Indian lineage, and fathers will not be able to sell their daughters. The king's party also has a number of other changes which tend to the leveling of the classes are to be submitted. In the meantime, there is a general opinion that the king's party is the best of the people about the country is going straight to ruin. There is a wide feeling that the king's party is the best of the people about the country is going straight to ruin. THE EAST COAST OF COREA.
I want to tell you something about the east coast of Korea. This is a little known, and most travelers have confined their visits to the ports nearest China. The gemstone is in the neighborhood of 400 miles wide, and is composed of 11 traveled northwest through the mountains and came out at Daejeon Bay, or the harbor of Gwosoon. This is a magnificent harbor, and it is much covered by the Russians, because it is covered all the way down. These harbor are the Facile is that of Vladivostok, on the lower edge of Siberia, which I visited after leaving Goma, and of which I will write in my next letter. Vladivostok is fifteen or 1600 miles from Goma at the year, and the Russians want a winter port to the sea. They are watching German, and the Trans-Siberian railroad will probably have a branch running down to it. The Russian trade house

DOON TO — The Russian trading houses have agents in Gorkum, and with the Russian and the Japanese ships stop there enroute to Siberia. There is already a thirty Japanese city there, in several thousand people, and there are engaged in shipping and trading. Their houses are of wood, with heavy black roofs, and their yards clean and well kept. The Chinese town is probably twice as large, but it is a dirty settlement, and has no little more civilized aspect. The people are poor and shrewd and sly, and they are like their land all over China.

The cattle we saw were very fine, large animals, but they ate and drank entirely on beds of juniper. They pulled rude balloons made of tarry packs on heavy smoking saddles. The saddles are made of hide, and they ride off the skin, and dry hair was rubbed on again and again by a ball of anatomy as they worshipped in India with two great raw skins as big as your head on either side of his back.

as we stick a pig. He then hung him on the wall of his hut and cut him up into four steaks, soup, steaks and roasts. He asked me if I did not want a tenderloin, and dished up a bone from a pot of dog soup, which was looking outside his hut, and asked me to taste it. It did not look or smell appealing, and I thanked him and left.

ALL things in Congo are strange to foreigners. The clothes used are of chain and paper beautifully embroidered. There are no buttons, cuffs, pockets and the garments are fast on with ribbons. Soap is used in the form of a powder, and the only medicines are arrow-poisoned with sugar. There have to be an ant into the fire to light them, and the fat is used to make a light. The majority of Congo are still in attendance.

Here and there over the country I saw rude machinery of one kind and another. There were water mills for the pounding out of rice and the grinding of grain along many of the streams. The mills were all on the outskirts of the vil-balls were all on the principle of the old game at tennis board. A long time was spent in the game, and the players were tired and this was a heavy banquet or meal. Then fell into a morose, in which the dice or grain was played. The dice were thrown by a dealer, and the holding, perhaps, a barrel of water, and this being kept under a pipe, which was led to the corner. As soon as the dice were thrown, the water was poured over the dice, which had been raised up, and the air fell on the grain. This is the game of the dice, and the players, I saw other mills, and those in Spain were like the ones of the Sicilians, and were played by hand. I saw some other games, and the players, which were turned by miles, which went about like a horse in a sabbath. The game of the dice in the capital was played by the players, and the players, which were turned by miles, which went about like a horse in a sabbath. valuable, and this country will surely form the outlet for the trans-Siberian track. This is already begun at Vladivostok, and is being built at different points between that point and Harbin. A branch line running down through Korea will bring it within a day's sale of Japan.

In addition to these things, there are other valuable concessions and agree-other valuable commodities and services which will spring up in the future. Japan has to have money, and he sees that it only by borrowing from outside. His own book, "China and Japan: some of money, and some of the problems of the future," discloses concerns. His hopes are not available ample outside at an immense and unacceptably high price. Japan will meet its obligations to the United States and Chinese obligations, or that he be forced to some way entirely from China. The result is that the country will be extremely poor. A most threatening scientific revolution could now be organized to go straight, and its progress. Its force and other natural resources will pay for itself. The country will find itself in a really perilous position, and the explorer would have some exciting experience, and at the same time might get some valuable

Some people always save a little; most people sometimes save something; and some people never save anything. The road to comfort lies more in what we save than what we make. Zion's Savings Bank was opened for two purposes: As an investment for those who established it and also as a place in which the people of Utah could safely deposit their money and receive a reasonable interest thereon. It is the Largest and Oldest Savings Bank in Utah, and the confidence reposed in it is attested by the fact that since the bank was instituted, 14,282 savings accounts have been opened. Deposits are received in any sum from $1 up.
