Longdowise juscritons and to ke distinguish all the blouses this year, and very new deep rokes or crosswine trimmings are seen. It is so easy to apply these straight up and down trimmings that often a simple little ready-made waist of fine material may be dressed up in this way. Tucked britists was used for this dainty waist, and the insertions are of heavy Venise lace, with a shaped modallion of the same lace across the front. A little yoke of Valencleanes is set in above this madallion and below it oblique trimmings of the Val. give the effect of a yest. In these blouses, which combine sheer fabrics with heavy lace, the trimming, of course, outwears the conwebby material. Often the lace, if earefully ripped away from an old biouse can be used through another meason in a new setting.

A bit of dull ross-pink velvet ribbon at one side seems to hold this airy structure from blowing away.
