

MASTER PLUMBERS CLOSE THEIR CASE

Four Witnesses Examined This Morning Complete Testimony
Of Applicants.

THE ETHICS OF UNIONISM

President of Union Says He Believes
He Has a Right to Present His Side
To Working Members.

After examining four more witnesses to show that the members of the local plumbers' union had interfered with their work and intimidated their men, the master plumbers closed their case, in which they seek to secure an injunction against the striking plumbers. The defense opened its case by calling R. D. Evans, president of the local plumbers' union, and on cross-examination some ethics of unionism were brought out. Evans declared that he thought that he had a right to go to places where plumbing work was being done by non-union men and attempt to induce the plumbers to quit work for a money consideration or other inducements as long as he did it peacefully. He admitted that the union had paid one man's fine who had assaulted a non-union plumber and assisted him to leave the city. He denied that he had intended any methods of using violence in compelling the non-union men to stop work. He admitted, however, that he could not control the tactics of the members of the union.

Parley Hurt, the secretary of the strike committee, was the next witness called. He was under a searching cross-examination when the court took an adjournment for the noon recess.

INTIMIDATION OF MEN.

Direct evidence of interference and intimidation with the non-union men by the striking plumbers was brought out yesterday afternoon in the injunction suit brought by the master plumbers against local union No. 19 of Journeymen Plumbers. W. E. Cook, who was employed by Charles Higson, a master plumber, testified in regard to the assault made upon him by the strikers. Cook was hired by Higson in Cleveland, O., to come to Salt Lake and work for him during the strike. Cook arrived here with others on July 29 last. Upon reaching the Oregon Short Line depot in the evening they were met by a delegation of plumbers, who gave them a very warm reception and greeted them with cries of "scabs," "rats," "chalmers," and other offensive expressions.

He replied it "was none of their business where he was from," and that having gone but five or six steps, some man ran back of him and kicked him. He thereupon, with his party, boarded a streetcar accompanied by the delegation of union men that had been at the depot, and proceeded to the corner of First South and Main streets, where they all left the car.

At this place the same man who had kicked him at the depot ran up behind him and struck him underneath the jaw and in the forehead, causing him to stagger and to drop his suit case, and that his hat flew off; that policemen were then secured and they proceeded to Higson's shop, still accompanied by the local plumbers, and that after remaining there for some time they were taken to the Tuxedo hotel for the night.

On various occasions afterward, at restaurants, at his work and on the streets, Cook was approached by members of the local plumbers' union and told to "get out of town or they would carry him out," that they would "get him," and made other hostile demonstrations.

Roy Spencer, who was also employed as a strike breaker, was a witness to the assault made upon Cook. He said that it occurred at the corner of First South and Main streets on the night of July 29, and that the assault was made by a union plumber named Melcher, and that he (the witness) was himself assaulted about the same time in front of the Pacific Express company's office on First South street by a

WEINSTEINER THREATENED.

Morris Weinstein declared that he was intimidated and that the union men were lying about watching for him and threatening him. He said that every time he went into the hotel restaurant that the union men would be there, and that they would be with him when he came out.

"You fellows are scabbing around and the best thing you can do is to get out of town, or we'll carry you out," the striking plumbers told him, he testified. The witness said, in company with another Cleveland plumber named Licker, and upon invitation of certain of the union men, they started to go to the street and "first started to converse and then threaten and finally started to talk and asked them to come," they visited Labor hall one evening, and that upon arriving there they found "the secretary of the union, perhaps the president, and a few sitting together and the rest of the bunch off to one side of the hall."

At that time they started to talk to him and he told them that he was $3000 away from home and he was not going to beat it, but if they would pay his fare back he was willing to go; and that they thereupon said to him, "You will beat it the same as the rest of our boys will do, or if you don't we will carry you out; it will serve you a lesson; it will do you good."

Also, that on another occasion when he was in company with Licker, they went into Bond's restaurant and saw one, but when they came out there were eight or nine of the union plumbers, who crowded them, and that four of them backed him up against a plate glass window and were molting to others to come up, and when one of them turned around he got out of the window and ran into the restaurant, and started to go out the back way, but found two of the union plumbers at the back.

He then asked the cook to send some one to telephone for his employer, Rees, which was done, and Rees came in response to the message, and that as they went out, one of the union plumbers said, "You had better follow them and take them around wherever they go."

RISCUIT COMPANY ASSESSES.

New Company Formed in Order to Allow of This Being Done.

At a meeting of the directors of the Riscuit Mining company, this morning it was decided to file the articles of incorporation of the new company to which the property of the old company is to be decided in order to make the stock assessable. The new company is to be "The Riscuit Mining company, the word 'the' being the only change in the title of the old company, who holds in the new company will be given to holders of the stock in the old company, share for share.

The directors of the new company levied the first assessment today being 1 cent a share on the outstanding stock amounting to 1,600,000 shares, or $16,000 which is to be put into development work.

The company owns a group of 14 claims in Cherry creek district, Nev., of which two are patented. Upwards of $1,000,000 was taken out of the property in the early days. The present company has spent in the neighborhood of $60,000 on the property and shipped some ore, which runs about 20 ounces silver, being in the form of chlorides. The deepest workings are 900 feet, and it is the intention of the company to at once increase the present force at the mine.

GEORGE FOUND GUILTY.

Sentenced to Concurrent Terms of One Year Each for Cattle Stealing.

Allison A. George, who has been on trial on the federal court for the past three days on a charge of stealing cattle from Utah reservation, Indiana, was today found guilty by the jury on all four counts of the indictment, and was sentenced by Judge Page Morris to one year and one day in the Leavenworth national prison. The sentence was the same on each count of the indictment, but all were made concurrent by the court.

William Wash and James Wash were the injured parties in the case, which brought forth some interesting points. They testified that in December, 1908, they lost 12 cattle, and in the following month 11 more disappeared. Allison acknowledged that about that time he had bought that number of cattle from an Indian who he supposed had a good right to them. He drove them from Myton to Price and there disposed of them.

The point brought up as to the ownership of the cattle was decided in favor of the United States by Judge Morris and so specified in his instructions to the jury. Otherwise the bench was impartial in his instructions, which were given on 10 o'clock this morning. The interesting point in the case was that property of the Indians, allotted lands, implements and stock still remained the possession of the government to all legal intents and purposes.

EXPECT TO LAND BOLD HIGHWAYMAN

Sheriff's Force Takes Up Trail of Men Police Failed to Land.

POLICE ROUND UP HOBOES

Attempts Made to Have Victims Identify Vagrants Who Do Not Answer Descriptions Given.

Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp is close on the trail of the two reckless highwaymen, who, after committing a dozen bold holdups in Salt Lake City and successfully eluding the incompetent efforts of Chief of Police Barlow to capture them, appeared at Midvale, Thursday night, and held up the Scandinavian house there, holding Andrew Nelson, the bar tender and, a big crowd of men at bay and robbing 10 of their pay checks, besides getting away with $120 from the cash register in the bar room.

The two holdups entered the place with masks. The bar room was crowded with men who work at the smelters at Bingham Junction, many of whom had not cashed their monthly pay checks. Payment had been stopped in local banks on checks from the United States smelter.

It is almost certain that these are the same men who have committed numerous daring hold-ups throughout this city recently. Chief of Police Barlow has been utterly unable to cope with the situation, and his failure to apprehend the robbers has brought a carnival of crime upon the city as the hold-up and burglars are swarming into Salt Lake, eager to take advantage of this city in its helplessness.

All over the city, men of different political affiliations are talking over the newly suggested scheme of forming a citizens' committee, as it is feared that the necessity for a civic organization for the suppression of crime is imperative, in view of the fact that the police are not equal to the task.

The situation in Salt Lake City today resembles that which prevailed in San Francisco, when the citizens, outraged beyond endurance by the incompetency of the chief of police, took matters into their own hands and organized a great vigilance committee to clean the city of criminals of all kinds.

ROBBERS GROW BOLDER.

Night after night, bold robberies have been committed with such audacity as to leave the victims fairly speechless. Holdups have calmly walked into drug stores, in front of which brilliant lights shone, with pedestrians walking by and policemen sauntering along the block, without molestation.

The crime has been reached within the last three days. It appears that the same men turned three different "tricks" early Thursday morning, and although Chief of Police Barlow was immediately notified, his methods have been so ineffectual and his directions to his men so obtuse that no captures have been made. The failure to land the real criminals, Chief Barlow is herding very poor old tramp in town into the city prison, and then calls the attention of the hold up robbers to the try to identify the friendless hobo who are held in detinue.

For instance, two unfortunates, who gave their names as Thomas McCrow and George Edwards, were grabbed at 4:45 o'clock this morning and held up suspects in the city prison. Chief of Police Barlow thought he had the two robbers who held up the Richins brothers, motor men and conductor of the Wandanore streetcar, which was held up at the end of that line shortly after midnight, Thursday morning. But the Richins brothers were called in this morning and flatly stated that McCrow and Edwards were not the holdups, and that neither answered the description of the holdups who robbed them. Chief of Police Barlow was stated at the capture of McCrow and Edwards, because one of the men happened to have a bloody handkerchief in his pockets when searched at the police station. The chief thought that they were the men who had held up the Wandanore car, as it was known that one of the latter had cut his hand in smashing a pane of glass in the store of Henry Massard, just opposite the park, a short time before the holdup of the streetcar men occurred.

SHERIFF AFTER THEM.

Edwards had a badly injured hand, but it developed that he had been hurt by the blow from a heavy hammer, and it was not a cut. To make the case against Edwards and McCrow more absurd, the Richins brothers and George Edwards, who witnessed the robbery, all were brought in and after closely scrutinizing the prisoners, emphatically declared that they were not the guilty men.

Sheriff Sharp and his deputies have lost no time in starting after the robbers who have been terrorizing Salt Lake City, however, and though Chief of Police Barlow has been unable to capture them, it is almost certain that the sheriff and his men will soon apprehend them.

According to advices received from Marshal Stokes of Midvale, the two holdups were named when they entered the Scandinavian house. They carried about $200, including the money taken from the cash register and nine men who were standing in the bar room. One robber wore a regular black mask, while the other had a dark handkerchief over his face. One robber is described as being tall, light complexion, stocky-bodied, with a malarious on the neck. The other holdup is said to have been tall, dark complexioned, and he had only one eye.

Deputy Sheriff Ira Beckstead captured a man, who gave his name as James Jones, and lodged him in jail at Midvale as a suspect.

AMUSEMENTS

Theater—"The Soul Kiss" played to another light audience last evening and will wind up its Salt Lake engagement tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Orpheum—The attendance this week has been heavy, and another good turnout is looked for this evening, which is generally accepted as being "society" night.

Colonia—The merry entertainment which sails under the name of "The Time, the Place, and the Girl" is in its closing performances at this house.

Grand—The sale is now going on for next week's performances of "The Great Divide," which will serve to introduce the new leading man, Walter McCullough.

Bungalow—In the change of bills at the Bungalow last night a notable actor of the old school appears, one more of the "legits," as the slang of the profession knows him, who has descended to the drama to present a playlet of the popular vaudeville type. He is Milton Nobles, and with him is Dolly Nobles, both known to the stage of years ago, with only tender and pleasant memory. With them is Willie B. Thayer, and the capable little company of players present an excellent comedietta, "Why Walker Reformed." The story of the playlet tells about a loving husband who adorned himself with an overcoat not his own and as was to be expected, in the pockets his trusting wife was rudely awakened by finding love letters. The comedy of the playlet is wholesome and diverting and all ends happily after copious explanations. Milton Nobles and the other two members of the company possess greater talent than is ordinarily seen in the vaudeville stage and their act alone is well worth seeing, though the other numbers of the bill are well presented and attractive throughout.

Cardus and Maud are the stars of the sensational equilibrium act. The company has some original and thrilling acts and is equal in all respects and superior in many points to any act of the type ever presented here. Jack Oliver is a clever comedian and his humor is to be marked by an entire absence of any offending features. Buford, Bennett and Buford are in an offering in song and dance are certainly a credit to the bill.

The reception to Miss Myrtle Ballinger, known in Ogdan as "The Nightingale," was an enthusiastic as ever, and the quality singer has won a lasting place with the house patrons. The Thirve Kubns with their musical novelties were especially good and throughout the bill is one of exceptional merit.

FUNERAL OF DR. DAVIDSON.

Simple Service Held This Morning With Burial in Mt. Olivet.

The funeral of Dr. James Davidson, a noted surgeon, who died at his home, 242 east First South street, Tuesday morning after suffering for several years from a complication of asthma, lung trouble, and blindness, was held this morning from the family residence, Rev. Charles C. McIntire, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, officiated and delivered a eulogy in which he paid a touching tribute to the character of the popular physician. Interment was in Mount Olivet cemetery. The funeral services were quite simple, only the immediate friends and relatives of the deceased attending, as it was private.

Dr. James Davidson was born in Ireland, of Scotch parentage, and in his early youth removed to Scotland with his parents. He came to America 22 years ago. After taking his degree at the University of Minnesota, he entered the practice of his profession, and distinguished himself as a surgeon. Over-application to his duties caused a complete break down, and seven years ago he sought the climate of the west for restoration of his health. He leaves a host of friends in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., Chicago and throughout Utah to mourn his death, which is a distinct loss to his profession. He is survived by a widow, and two sons, John and Fred Davidson, all of whom are living in this city.

PRISONER BARES BACK AS PROOF

Stripped to the Waist, John Kothlaftis Offers Scars as Evidence.

RELIES ON SELF DEFENSE.

Endeavors to Prove That Dead Man, His Victim, Fired the First Shot.

Stripped to his waist, John Kothlaftis, who is on trial before Judge Thomas D. Lewis, charged with the murder of Peter Getis, exhibited to the jury this morning the scars of the three wounds he received in the deadly duel which was fought in Bingham Canyon on December 23, 1908, when Getis was mortally wounded. By the expert testimony of Dr. P. D. Straup, who dressed Kothlaftis's wounds, Atty. Samuel A. King attempted to show that Getis fired the first shot while Kothlaftis was running away from him. The bullet took effect in the left arm. In self-defense, Atty. King sought to show, Kothlaftis drew his revolver when he fell to the ground from the shock of the wound and fired at Getis blindly in the dark. Kothlaftis received a second shot in the chest, penetrating the left lung as he attempted to scramble to his feet, and fell to the ground again. Kothlaftis shot again in the direction which he fired upon and received a third wound in the hand in which he held his revolver. The bullet broke a bone in his hand rendering it useless and then Kothlaftis ran down the mountain side with Getis still firing at him.

After Dr. Straup had gone thoroughly into a description of the wounds and the range the bullets took after striking the body, he was subjected to a rigid cross-examination. Dr. Straup declared that it would have been impossible for Getis to have stood facing Kothlaftis and indicating the wound Kothlaftis received in the left arm, the entire case seemed to pivot upon this point this morning.

Two witnesses were examined this morning in behalf of the defense. They were Mike Sotopolous and George Economos. They related the circumstances which followed the shooting. When Kothlaftis ran into a saloon about half a mile down the canyon, they testified that he was calling for help and declared that Getis was still pursuing him.

In the session yesterday afternoon five witnesses were examined for the defense. Christ Kolovos testified in regard to the first shooting which occurred 15 days before the fatal duel was fought. He declared that George Getis carried a revolver after the first shooting and threatened to kill Kothlaftis. Attorney King attempted to introduce testimony to show Getis's character, that he was known as a prizefighter and that he was known as a "bad gun man." This was objected to and Judge Lewis ruled that it should be stricken out. Mr. King took issue with the court declaring that he was prejudicing the jurors. Mr. King was reprimanded by the court and the tilt ended.
