WOMAN'S WORLD.

kirts grow wider and wider. Even he moderate ones are now at least five eards around the hem, while eight are eards around the hem, while eight are not too many to be considered for kirts of thin material. Materials have to be cut into many gores to make this sreat width possible. As a consessed, perhaps, or at least a compensalien, skirts are trimmed hardly at all except those of elaborate costumes. The hem finish appears on nearly all the new tailor-made and demi-toilet skirts.

A very handsome traveling gown of brown chiffon taffeta had a skirt and long coat of the silk and a blouse of coffee-colored embroidered batiste. The skirt was laid in box plaits very small at the top and widening below, with thirrings between the plaits. The skirt was very wide at the hem and had no trimming. The coat was a graceful affair in an Empire design. The waist . . .

MRS. ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT.

It is rumored that Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt is to begin a severe fight with the Pennsylvania Railroad Tunneling company because of the terrible noise at night due to blasting. Mrs. Vanderbilt's apartment is near the scene of the Tunnel company's heaviest blasting operations, and if the complaint is carried into court it will bring in the names of other prominent people who have apartments in the same house. The manager of the Warrington apartment house has applied in the supreme court for an injunction order to restrain the contractors from blasting between 6 p. m. and 7 a. m.

part of the cost was tucked on the shoulders and was gathered into a stitched belt just above the highest waist line. There was a collar with tabs of brown lace and the gauntlet cuffs of the full, loose sleeves were also of the lace. Otherwise the coat was untrimmed. The skirt way taid in shallow plaits and was bordered all around with a stitched band.

good and worthy. Even the cheapest oak furniture can be made over. For cottage bedrooms cheap bureaus and tables are often to be had, which after a little preparation, are artistic successes.

Traveling gowns of this description are very popular this season, as they are remarkably cool, and the coat covers up all sins of travel when the wearer leaves the cars at the end of her

One sees plenty of shepherd's hiald traveling gowns, and very cool and ap-propriate they seem. Somehow these gowns, made with short, plaited skirts the right thing for the woman who is at her best in a mannish linen shirt waist. The two types are alike service-able, practical, and smart. With the checked suits are worn wide black beits of leather or suede, with enormous gilt r leather of brass buckles.

For short journeys nothing is better than heavy linen, blue, brown, during pink, or even white. The smartest linen coat suit is made with a short, platted skirt and a box coat. Many of the white ones have colored linen collars and cuffs. The thinnest of blouses may be worn under the loose cours. be worn under the loose coats and white canvas or black or tan leather ties may be worn.

For traveling suits of whatever ma terial, patent leather hats in a good shade of gray are offered. The shapes are modifications of the sailor, and the hats are swathed in long gray veils.

One has to be very careful about one's yell in these particular days, Primarily, it thust match the hat, but that is not all. The eccentric shapes of many of the new hats have to be taken into consideration in selecting a veil. All mill liners keep veils in stock, and it is good plan to allow one's milliner to se-lect and adjust a veil with every hat which requires a veil. Of course one pays a little more than at the shops, but perhaps it is worth it.

The popularity of taffeta is again at its height. Not only the dark shades for street and traveling are in demand, but the pale and bright shades are being worn for dresslest functions. These brilliant gowns seem to accord perfectly with the flower-trimmed, tip-tilted hats so much affected. The fashionably gowned woman is a dainty object this summer, with her taffetas, her flowers, and her lace guimpes and sleeves, not to mention her much decorated parasol. Stewed cucumbers are not nearly as well known as they should be. The flavor is very delicate, and often puzzles flavor is very delicate, and often puzzles the uninitiated to know exactly what vegetable is being eaten. The cucumbers are peeled and quartered, and the pieces cut crosswise three times. Stew in salted water and cook until tender.

Drain and serve in a thin, white sauce.

An authority on woollen goods says that the proper way to dry them is to hang them on the line without wringing out any of the water, Dried in this way the shrinkage is said to be very little.

The white sailor hat left over from last summer may be in perfect condition except for a yellowish tinge, which, of course, marks it for an old hat. It is said that such hats may be whitened perfectly if rubbed hard with a paste made of sulphur and lemon juice. When quite dry brush off every trace of the sulphur with a stiff brush.

All this applies to old furniture bought at sales and auction rooms for trifling sums. The greatest care should be observed that the pieces are free from vermin. If they are clean and whole and fairly well designed they are worth buying. Enamel paint is cheap, and the prettiest bruss or glass knobs are too brust for very little. It is a fushion in a certain tearoon in New York to serve small pitchers o melted sugar with leed tea. The sugar is malted down with a very little boiling water. This is better than serving powdered augar, which is likely to be part marble dust or cornstarch.

Meakin slipped away to Philadelphia on business, he declared, one day last week, but friends suspect he sought the city of "Brotherly Love" for a few days rest and quiet. No city this side of the extreme point of Alaska can furnish such perfect quiet as Philadelphia during the summer; its inhabitants migrate in a body to mountain and seaside, and only deserted streets and empty shops are to be seen. But no empty shops are to be seen. But no matter what the conditions of city or town, friend Meakin is working steadily and effectively, and is gaining favor with press and public.
