MISS DICKINSON REVIEWED.

ANNA DICKINSON appeared lately at the Opera House, Williamsport, Pennsylvania. She had announced "Down Brakes" as the subject of her lecture; but she changed her mind and gave her lecture on affairs in Utah instead. Judging by the comments of the Daily Standard, published at Williamsport, her lecture did not favorably impress the citizens of that place. The Standard says:

"Miss Anna professes to be thoroughly posted on the practicalities of Mormonism, and to have thoroughly interviewed some of the disaffected 'Saints' amongst the Mormon hierarchy. On the other hand, it will be remembered, that we published, some weeks ago, an extract from an article in the Deseret News, which charged that she had no opportunity to learn anything of moment concerning the Brighamites, as her time was spent, during her visit at Salt Lake City, in haunting around with a certain individual."

It continues:
"It is well known, when the Mormons were driven from Nauvoo, that Utah was considered a barren desert. That people have made it to blossom as the rose; thousands of innocents have grown up under their church delusion, and they have become thrifty and powerful. Has the thirst for blood become so great that it can only be satisfied with the destructive horrors of another civil war? Army contractors, camp followers and women's rights advocates, clamor for a war of extermination, but we think there is yet sufficient sense left at Washington to prevent a resort to such an extremity."

"Miss Dickinson took occasion, in her sepulchral speech, to interpolate an attack upon the young men who invited Brigham Young to deliver a lecture in this city. It may be a matter of surprise to her, though it is quite true—that the members of the committee have survived the blast which she intended to deliver, and notwithstanding her spiteful, feverish denunciation—they slept well. It is time that Miss D. should learn that there are certain amenities which the well bred always observe, and that it is not polite, but impertinent, to volunteer suggestions concerning the peculiar business of others. The committee that invited Young did not think that the boards on which Dickinson stood, or the walls that echoed her eloquence, would be consecrated by her presence. The political harangue should know that she was not invited here, because those inviting her indorse her sentiments. Were any noted rascal to deliver an address in our place, he would be listened to, but that would be no evidence that his infamies were approved."

"Before attempting to edify others, Miss Dickinson should learn a lesson, which she seems to be ignorant—that is—next to female virtue, nothing is more admired by the gentler than good manners."

Miss Dickinson will find, before she gets through, that she has not made the capital she anticipated by her attacks upon the people of Utah. Her conduct in thus lecturing, propagating prejudice and telling downright lies is most infamous, and will yet bring upon her the condemnation which she deserves. There was scarcely a person, out of the thousands of people who visited this Territory last summer, who did not have better opportunities of becoming familiar with Utah and the condition of affairs here than Anna Dickinson. The words of the poet will yet prove true in her case:

"And yet I knew that every wrong,
However old, however strong,
But waited God's avenging hour.
I knew that truth would crush the lie
Somehow; sometime, the end would be."

CONSIDERABLE curiosity is excited in the minds of the sixteen hundred men employed in the United States Navy Yard, Mare Island, California, by the activity with which the work is pushed forward there, and the secrecy that is maintained respecting it. The secrecy is said to be something like that which was preserved during the war time in the Eastern yards. It is said that no officer of a foreign Power is allowed access to the work-shops, for the purpose of examining new styles of armament, or the progress made in the ships undergoing equipment.

Upwards of one hundred and forty-two thousand emigrants reached the port of New York in 1898. To obtain an approximate idea of what the emigrants brought into the country in ready cash, the Commissioners of Emigration took particular pains that year to inquire of each one what amount of money he or she brought to the country. Many of them were unwilling to give the information sought; but it was ascertained that they had brought with them, in money, an average of sixty-eight dollars per head, amounting in the aggregate to about nine million, seven hundred thousand dollars.

The San Francisco Morning Call uses this information to show its readers that the right kinds of immigrants are of benefit to a State in more ways than one. Speaking of immigration to California it says:

"Probably ten thousand immigrants to this State would add a million of dollars—and might add several millions—to the permanent capital of the country, besides the far greater benefit they would be in the new wealth they would make by cultivating the ground, manufacturing and mining. Up to a certain point of population, an increase of it, of a self-sustaining character, is a benefit. It will probably be a good while before California's inhabitants will reach that degree of density. We have such a vast extent of territory, and are notwithstanding the railroad, so far from the great radiating human centers, that our increase from immigration must necessarily be rather slow. We need not, for many years, fear an overplus of valuable population."

WASHINGTON.

Agricultural Report—Senator Pratt not Resigned.

In the report of the current month of the Department of Agriculture, it is said in nearly all the principal parts of the corn growing section in the west there is an average reduction of fully 20 per cent in the yield per acre. With an actual enlargement of the area under culture, it is certain that there is actually less corn produced this year than last. The cotton crop is a little more than ten per cent above the yield of last year. The potato crop is very large; the greatest increase is, respectively, in Kansas, Illinois, Iowa, and all the western States. New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and all the eastern States except Minnesota, the southern States excepting only Florida, Louisiana and Texas, have reduced their aggregate tobacco crop. A summary of the return would seem to indicate an aggregate reduction of twenty per cent on the apple crop. Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Island had but half a crop; New Hampshire and Connecticut three-fourths. The Southern States report generally a small yield. In all portions of the West many thousands of bushels have been frozen on the trees.

The statement that Senator Pratt, of Indiana, has resigned, is denied by authority from that gentleman. He has not resigned, nor does he intend to.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boutwell's Speech.

BOSTON.—The Secretary of the Treasury lectured at the Bulfinch Mercantile Library Association last evening on the transition period of the United States' to a fair audience, composed largely of business men and particularly those interested in finance. After viewing the cause of the late war, the speaker referred to the system of public instruction now instituted in the Southern States, the advantage of which could not adequately be established; the sentiment North, aided by the magnificent gifts of George Peabody and others, was producing proofs which by the education of the masses, will prove, ultimately, the sustaining prop of the Republic. The speaker took a hopeful view of the condition of the South and the whole country, and said that although the events of the past ten years have left difficulties—in the loss of commerce, the creation of vast public debts and the system of national taxation, there was still a large balance to the credit of the nation. If the country remained at peace and there is no contrary indication, the final liquidation of the public debt would not be very remote.

The Secretary emphatically contradicted the prevalent idea that Americans, as a nation, were grasping and anxious for extension of territory; for within its past twenty-five years the Government has repeatedly rejected proffered territory. He instanced Mexico, which was in the possession of the United States troops but the Government then accepted only a few outlying States, paying for them liberally. The Sandwich Islands, he had occasion to know, had been tendered years ago. Other islands, from time to time have been offered and rejected. We take nothing by oppression; we leave other nations to take by force. The speaker was frequently applauded, though some were disappointed at his apparent avoidance of special financial topics, which are now so generally discussed.

KENTUCKY.

Negro Testimony Refused.

LOUISVILLE.—The United States authorities arrested two white men, last evening, under the Civil Rights Law. They were brought before the City Court to-day, charged with killing a negro; but were acquitted, none but negro testimony being offered against them, which was refused.

Verdict of Manslaughter.

CINCINNATI.—The jury of the criminal court found a verdict of manslaughter against John Cottle, policeman, who found a man drunk on the door step of his house and beat him over the head with a mace.

A meeting of the bench and bar in this city was held in the United States court rooms this afternoon and adopted appropriate resolutions on the death of Stanton.
