YOUR BACKACHE WILL YIELD

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rockland, Maine.—"I was troubled for a long time with pains in my back and side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged, and I thought I should read a testimonial about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and thought I would try it. After taking three bottles I was cured, and never felt so well in all my life. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my friends. Mrs. WILL TORSIG, 6 Columbia Avenue, Rockland, Me.

Backache is a symptom of female weakness or derangement. If you have backache, do not neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so safely and surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Cure the cause of these distressing aches and pains and you will become well and strong.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has restored health to thousands of women.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge.

every of the pole. The message which was made public by Prof. McMillan at Battle Harbor, read:

"On Sept. 19, 1900.—Arrived on board ship. The trip was entirely satisfactory. There was no ice in the straits. Captain came on board the 24th. Concentrate all your observations on the ice and the soundings north from Cape Morris Jessup. The intended supplies for me for this purpose.

"(Signed) 'COMMANDER PEARY'."

Commander Peary's adherents assert that the words "northern trip" were entirely satisfactory. It indicates clearly that the expedition had accomplished its purpose.

Prof. McMillan said at Battle Harbor that he had seen a score of more of correspondents of his journey. He will head no more trips to the Arctic, nor, for that matter, to the Antarctic. His work in the ice field is finished.

"I have accomplished the ambition of my life," said the commander. "I shall always be interested in Arctic exploration, but it must now be left to younger men."

Commander Peary often broke his narrative on the expedition to a score of correspondents of his journey. He will head no more trips to the Arctic, nor, for that matter, to the Antarctic. His work in the ice field is finished.

"I shall pay no attention to the false stories of any side issues," said Commander Peary. "That are put out to detract from the main question. 'Has Cook been at the pole?'"

"Do you think it possible for any man to make observations to prove that he was at the pole?" he was asked.

"In the opinion of Admiral Melville, U. S. N., Admiral Sir George Nares, R. N., and myself, yes," he responded.

Then he continued: "Do not care to speak of other observations in view of that claim and won't say anything more until the statement signed by another is offered and then I will submit my statement."

PEARY TELLS STORY OF CHRISTMAS IN ARCTIC.
Sydney, C. B., Sept. 19.—The story of Christmas day in the Arctic was pictured today by Commander Peary. At the Arctic contests were arranged by Prof. McMillan and a running course of 75 yards on the ice and snow was laid out beside the Roosevelt.

"The holiday was fittingly observed on the Roosevelt, and while much was taken the place of turkey, there were all sorts of puddings and sweetmeats on the table.

"We had Washington pudding, and plum pudding and mince, and a cooked chicken of good quality which his wife quietly gave to me before we left the south and told me to give it to her husband on Christmas day. I found that Mrs. Peary had been at the table the same way and had given him a cooked chicken for me to be opened on Christmas day. We had hot toddy and cigars for all. All the members of the expedition received a box of candy from Mrs. Peary."

Speaking of the scientific value of the expedition to the north pole, Commander Peary said that soundings from Cape Morris Jessup were valuable and supplemented the data given by Nansen and Amundsen on the other side of the pole.

"The reaching of the pole," added Peary, "is not of man's hand, but of the earth. As it stood, with the pole untraced, it was a continual reproach to civilization. The discovery of the south pole may now be looked for as an accepted fact. We have reached the pole by a route different than in the north. An expedition to the north pole must complete the work within the year. No more can be left for another year's operation while an autumn laya base which will be permanent for the future advance next year."

That Greenland and the Arctic region will become a summer resort in time is Commander Peary's belief, and Dr. Goodall, physician of the expedition, asserted that the dry air and constant sunlight of the summer was beneficial to the health of the men.

The explorer spoke sadly of the loss of Ross Marvin, who was drowned on April 11.

"We were in our igloos," said he, "when Cook and I and the ship's crew, when Peary, the steward, had christened Harrigan, came into camp with their heads down. They shook their heads and we knew that poor Marvin had been killed. They found the hole where he had fallen through the thin ice, and that they could see the back of his fur coat above the surface of the water."

Commander Peary was asked if he believed the pole could be reached again and to what he ascribed his success.

"I believe," he said, "that any member of my party could reach the pole twice out of three times just the same as Capt. Bartlett could take the Roosevelt through the ice floes to Cape Sheridan four out of five times. You get your training as you progress toward the pole. I keep myself sound, clean and straight, and this has been a great help in the trials of a rigorous climate."

The expedition this time was probably fortunate in the absence of winds east and west across our course and in the fortunate position of the ice in our way which kept the ice to the land.

"Again, we had the advantage of a new type of sledges, without which we would not have been able to make our march. This type of sledges, the Morris K. Jessup sledge, shows marked development. It reduces the traction force on the dogs and also reduces the strain on the driver. It is no picnic in the Arctic, just hard work all the time. There is no riding on the sledges, but just pushing every minute."

Prof. McMillan telling of finding relics and stores of earlier expeditions, said he came upon some supplies at Fort Conger which had been left there by the Greely expedition in 1881-84.

"There were coffee, sugar, oatmeal, and rations, and I tried them all," he said. "It seemed strange to think that it was of that party of 25 that had died of starvation after they had left these provisions behind. They had no uniforms of Gen. Greely, which I wore, and a book in which George W. Rice, photographer of the party, had placed some plates."

Prof. McMillan said that he found a sheet of paper on which were some notes addressed to the chairman of some banquet which had been held by the party in the Arctic. There were other relics, such as watch chains, and other trifles and stick pins.

"Near Etah I came upon the old Eskimo house in Thank God harbor, which had been used by the expedition of Col. Dr. Hall in 1871. I found it still standing, and on which was still written plainly the name of Sir John Lockwood. While at Kakan, I walked into an Eskimo hut and found the name of the house was the name of the ship Gjoa, which carried the Amundsen expedition in 1902-06. I gave the Eskimo a cup for themselves."

Prof. McMillan said he came on the old headquarters of the expedition of Admiral Sir George Nares near Cape Sheridan.

"Why was it to the pole with Commander Peary instead of Henson?" McMillan was asked.

"Because Henson was better fitted," he replied. "He was a stouter and had more experience, was a better sledge driver and repairer and in every way was the man to go."

ONE OF PEARY PARTY KNEW OF COOK'S STORY.
Battle Harbor, Labrador, Sept. 19.—(By Marconi Wireless via Cape.)—Sept. 19.—At least one of the Peary party knew long ago that Frederick A. Cook had reported having reached the pole. He is William Pritchard, assistant cook on the Roosevelt, who remained at Annatok to guard the stores.

lacy is already in port, the British squadron is expected this afternoon, and other foreign warships will be arriving daily. Official representatives of foreign governments are also arriving. The British arrived today from the Sultan of Turkey to inform President Taft of the nomination of the new British representative to the United States.

The American squadron of warships which alone will constitute the largest fleet of United States war vessels at this port, will arrive tomorrow and will anchor off Staten Island.

The Half Moon, a replica of the vessel in which Henry Hudson explored the harbor and river 300 years ago, has been completely rigged at the Brooklyn Navy yard and during the week it will be in the old Dutch costume, will rehearse the navigation of the old river as it is to have in the perfect control during the celebration.

The celebration is a reproduction of Fulton's application of steam to navigation to water craft, has had its acceptance trial and this week will entertain invited and special visitors.

Members of the celebration committee believe that there will be at least 1,000,000 and possibly 2,000,000 visitors in the city next week.
