

home Tuesday evening, the occasion being the 6th anniversary of his birth. CLUB CHAT.

The Daughters of the Revolution will meet next Saturday in the Exponent office in Templeton block and a Lincoln program will be given in celebration of the birthday anniversary of the martyred hero.

The annual election of officers took place at the Ladies' Literary club yesterday. The ticket voted upon being as follows: For president, Mrs. A. C. Irvine and Mrs. F. D. Bickford; for first vice president, Mrs. Arthur H. Bird; for second vice president, Mrs. M. L. The tramp problem is being discussed in many clubs in Massachusetts, and an effort will be made towards the establishment of a "work test" in the towns of the state. It is believed that the supplying of work for the tramp would relieve the community, and would tend to restrain the tramp himself from his miserable mode of life. It is certain that as long as women continue through mistaken kindness to supply food at the back door, just so long will the tramp nuisance continue to increase.

Club women have had it suggested that they use the opportunities which the summer vacation affords to aid in the protection of native wild flowers, some varieties of which seem threatened with total extermination. The mayflower has been all but destroyed on Cape Cod owing to careless gathering, and several places where the fringed gentian once flourished abundantly are now bare of the favorite blooms.

There is to be a woman's building at the proposed Lewis and Clark exposition in Oregon, two years hence, but at present there is some doubt as to which of two rival associations will have the building of it. The Portland Federation of Women's Clubs, which includes all the larger clubs in the city, determined to take the building as its principal work for the next two years, and made plans for a house such as the women fitted up a year and a half ago in Charleston, where the club women received and made welcome all visiting women. A committee of thirty-five was appointed to start the work. Just as things were fairly begun Mrs. Edyth Tozier Westhorpe, who was a commissioner from Oregon to the Pan-American exposition, organized an association of women, under the name of the Lewis and Clark club, for the purpose of erecting and conducting a woman's building at the exposition. The Federation expressed indignation and surprise, but the new club disavowed all intention of rivalry and offered to work with the Federation. The matter has been referred to the Lewis and Clark board.

The club department of a Boston paper tells of a peculiar kind of help which women in country towns are asking for, and which the State federations could easily give. "Women in these country towns, cut off from town and city privileges and opportunities, and with plenty of leisure and but little money, have heard eagerly of the arts and crafts movement, and are especially interested in that part which takes cognizance of the handicrafts of women in their homes. So they write letter after letter, eager, pathetic, appealing, asking help, and counsel. "I have my mother's loom," writes one; "could I get it out and do something with it that would bring me in money?" "Won't you write me about the rugs and the basket making?" asks another, and a third writes to ask about the old blue and white embroidery. The Massachusetts Federation could establish a small traveling exhibit of women's handicrafts, which would demonstrate not only a certain standard of work, but its market value, and if it would send this exhibit to country towns where women are eager and anxious for information which might be readily given, it would be doing a great work of the most practical value."

The Federal Woman's Equality league advocates the policy of forming at every election period a woman suffrage balancing ticket, composed of the candidates most positively and reliably favorable to woman suffrage, selected in nearly equal proportions from the tickets of the principal political parties in the field. The balance of power between the parties may be thus effected. The association urges that in no surer way can be brought about the election of congressmen favorable to woman suffrage than by getting women to take an active part in the election at the very foundations of political power.

The Arts and Crafts Society of Rochester are holding an exhibition of hand work of various kinds, including Deerfield embroideries, hand-made furniture, woven rugs, bindings, illuminations, potteries, metalwork, and jewelry, mostly the work of women. These 25 the exhibitions were sent to New York. Institute are filled with beautiful objects from all over the country. After April 25 the exhibitions were sent to New York.
