IN PILGRIM DAYS

Speaking of linens our thoughts revert to the pilgrim women of long ago. Tradition tell us that their chiefest delight was love of home. And when we think of those royal women, the names of Priscilla and John Alden and their fiery, bashful friend, Miles Standish, occur to us. Though more than 250 years have passed, descendants of the Alden family have in their possession heirlooms; pieces of linen, silver spoons, candle sticks, furniture, etc. How keen must have been the pleasure of Priscilla as she spread the spotless linen on the table at Thanksgiving time! And the sumptuous meal! The old home at Duxbury, Mass., still stands—has sheltered Aldens for ten generations.

An Hour's time away she whiles
Glancing through the num'rous piles
Of linen down the spacious aisles,
Her face wreathed in dimpled smiles.
