MUD PIES.

Under the apple trees, spreading and thick,
Happy with color a pun and a stick,
On the soft grass in the shadow that lies,
Our little Fanny is making mud pies.

On her brown apron and bright, dancing head,
Showers of pink and white blossoms are shed;
Tied to a branch that seems meant just for that,
Dances and flutters her little straw hat.

Dash, full of joy in the bright summer day,
Zealously chases the robins away,
Barks at the squirrels, or snaps at the flies,
All the while Fanny is making mud pies.

Sunshine and soft summer breezes assist,
While she is busy, are busy with her;
Cheeks rosy glowing, and bright sparkling eyes,
Bring they to Fanny, while making mud pies.

Dollies and playthings are all laid away,
Not to come out till the next rainy day,
Under the blue of these sweet summer skies,
Nothing so pleasant as making mud pies.

Gravely she stirs, with a serious look;
"Making believe" she's a true pastry cook;
Sundry brown splashes on forehead and eyes,
Show that our Fanny is making mud-p'es.

But all the soil of her innocent play,
Clean soap and water will soon wash away.
Many a pleasure in daintier guise,
Leaves darker traces than Fanny's mud pies.

My Midnight Peril.

The night of the 17th of October—shall I ever forget its pitchy darkness, the roar of the autumnal wind through the lonely forest, and the incessant down pour of the rain?

"This comes of 'short cuts,' I muttered petulantly to myself, as I plodded along, keeping close to the trunks of the trees to avoid the deep ravine, through which I could just hear the roar of the turbulent stream forty or fifty feet below. My blood ran cold as I thought what might be the possible condition. Why had I not been contented to keep in the high road?

Hold on! Was that a light, or are my eyes playing me false?

I stopped, holding on the low, redinous boughs of a hemlock that grew on the edge of the bank; for it actually seemed as if the wind would seize me bodily and hurl me down the precipitous descent.

It was a light—chank trevillence—it was a light, and no ignis fatuus or copse gleam to lure me on to destruction and death.

"Hallo-o-o-o!"

My voice rang through the woods like a clarion. I plunged onward through the tangled vines, dense briars, and rocky banks, until, gradually nearing, I could perceive a figure wrapped in an oil-cloth cape or cloak, carrying a lantern. As the dim light fell upon his face I almost recoiled. Would not solitude and the woods be preferable to the companionship of this withered, wrinkled, hideous old man? But it was too late to recede now.

"What's wanting?" he snarled, with a peculiar motion of the lips, that seemed to leave his yellow stumps of teeth all bare.

"I am lost in the woods; can you direct me to R—— station?"

"Yes; R—— station is twelve miles from here."

"Twelve miles!"

I stood aghast.

"Yes!"

"Can you tell me of any shelter I could obtain for the night?"

"No!"

"Where are you going?"

"To Drew's, down by the maple swamp."

"Is it a tavern?"

"No."

"Would they take me for the night? I could pay them well."

His eyes gleamed; the yellow stumps stood revealed once more.

"I guess so. Folks do stop there."

"Is it far from here?"

"Not very, about half a mile."

"Then let us make haste and reach it. I am drenched to the skin."

We plodded on, my companion more than keeping pace with me. Presently we left the edge of the ravine, entering what seemed like trackless woods, and keeping straight on until the lights of some habitation gleamed fitfully through the wet foliage.

It was a ruinous old place with the windows all drawn to one side as if the foundation had settled, and the pillars of a rude porch nearly rotted away.

A woman answered my fellow-traveler's knock. My companion whispered a word or two to her, and she turned to me with smooth, voluble words of welcome. She regretted the poverty of their accommodations, but I was welcome to them, such as they were.

"Where is Isaac?" demanded my guide.

"He has not come in yet."

I sat down on a wooden bench beside the fire and ate a few mouthfuls of bread.

"I should like to retire as soon as possible," I said, for my weariness was excessive.

"Certainly."

The woman started up with alacrity.

"Where are you going to put him?" asked my guide.

"Up chamber."

"Put him in Isaac's room."

"No."

"It's the most comfortable."

"I tell you no."

But here I interrupted the whispered colloquy.

"I am not particular—I don't care where you lodge me, only make haste."

So I was conducted up a steep ladder that stood in the corner of the room, into an apartment ceiled with sloping beams and ventilated by one small window, where a cot bedstead, crowded close against the board partition, and a pine table with two chairs, formed the sole attempts at furniture.

The woman set the light—an oil lamp—on the table.

"Anything more I can get you, sir?"

"Nothing, I thank you."

"I hope you'll sleep well, sir, when shall I call you?"

"At four o'clock in the morning, if you please. I must walk to R—— station in time for the seven o'clock express."

"I'll be sure and call you, sir."

She withdrew, leaving me alone in the gloomy little apartment. I sat down and looked around me with no very agreeable sensation.

"I will sit down and write to Alice," I thought, "that will soothe my nerves and quiet me perhaps."

I descended the ladder. The fire still glowed redly on the stone beneath, my companion, and the woman sat beside it talking in a low tone, and a third person sat at the table eating—a short, stout, villainous looking man, in a red flannel shirt and muddy trowsers.

I asked for writing materials and returned to my room to write to my wife.

"My darling Alice."

I paused, and laid down my pen as I concluded the words, half smiling to think what she would say could she know of my strange quarters.

Not till both sheets were covered did I lay aside my pen and prepare for slumber. As I folded the paper, I happened to glance toward my couch.

Was it the gleam of a human eye observing me through the cracks of the board partition, or was it but my own fancy? There was a crack there, but only blank darkness beyond; yet I could have sworn that something had sparkled balefully at me.

I took out my watch—it was one o'clock. It was scarcely worth while for me to undress for three hours' sleep; I would lie down in my clothes and snatch what slumber I could. So, placing my valise close to the head of my bed, and barricading the lockless door with two chairs, I extinguished the light and lay down.
