THIRTEEN MILLS AGAIN.

Councilman Hall Opposes Resolution Fixing Levy, But Motion to Strike Out Clauses is Lost.

The city council met in special session this morning to fix the tax rate for 1908, a recess having been taken from Monday evening for that pur-The rate of last year, namely 13 mills, was again made the basis for the municipality's revenue, and scarcely had the resolution left the council's hands before it bore the signature of the mayor.

There was one dissenting vote to the There was one dissenting yote to the tax resolution, which was presented by Councilman Biack. Mr. Hall op-posed the measure, after value en-deavoring to defeat two of the clauses. The first of these was the item of 1-3 of a mill "To purchase water sources, streams, and the land upon which such streams are appropriated, and canals; and to construct water works, and to and to construct water works, and canas, and to construct water works, and to supply water for irrigation and other water purposes." The other item op-posed by Mr. Hall was 1-12 of a mill "to construct and repair sewers and desine" drains.

DECLARED OUT OF ORDER.

DECLARED OUT OF ORDER. The explaining his position, Mr. Hall mail that all requirements for water were provided for in the bonds voted yesterday, and therefore a tax in that direction was unnecessary. In his mo-tion to strike out he was supported by Murdock and Cowburn, the only other members of the minority present. As the clause respecting sewer and drain the clause respecting sewer and drain repairs was declared by the chair to be strictly in conformity with the law, the motion to strike out was declared to be out of order. On the final vote of the resolutions Murdock and Cowburn vot-ed with the majority, leaving Mr. Hall alone in opposition.

THE LEVY.

THE LEVY. The levy provides 5 mills to defray contingent expenses; 42-3 mills to open and improve sidewalks and streets; 3½ mills for the payment of interest on bonds series 5, 6, % and 9, water bonds "A" and "D" and sever bonds; one-third of a mill for water purposes, as indicated; one-twelfth of a mill for sewers and drains; and one-third of a mill to maintain a public library and reading room.

They sat down to rest near Westmins-ter bridge, Looking up at the great clock tower, the future cabinet min-ister exclaimed, "Mother, If ever 1 have health and strength, no mother shall ever have to work as you have to, and no child do in life what I have to do." He has endeavored to keep his word. It is not so long ago that Mr. Burns made a will-probably revoked by this time. He left his best love to his wife, a sound constitution to his son, his tooks to his parish, and his debts to his country. The last legacy at least would be superfluous now. It is a singular and interesting his-tory, that of this stronglawed stalwart man. No one has seen more of the darker and more laborious side of life. darker and more laborious side of life. At 10 years of age he was a "tiger"— a page boy in buttons. Then he worked at Price's candle factory at Battersea at a wage of 8s a week. He has been a rivet heater in Iron works, and served as pot-boy on Sundays. It was that ex-perience that has made him a life-long abstainer. Not one minute of his scanty spare time was wasted. He read every-thing he could lay his hand on and his meager pocket money was mostly spent on books. While he was living with his mother in humble lodgings in Mill-bank he used to be awakened by the on books, while he was hving with his mother in humble lodgings in Mill-bank he used to be awakened by the clang of Big Ben at 6 in the morning. brother. Up to the time that Mr. Burns took office his income never exceeded £5 a week. Often it was nearer £3. But his absolute integrity has been proved again and again. On one occasion he was offered a large sum of money to support a bill in parliament. His reply was terse and virile. "Sir," he said to the tempter, "you are an unmitigated scoundrel!" And the would-be briber vanished. vanished.

vanished. Mr. Burns' increase of salary will probably rouse much comment. It has been said that he once declared that no man is worth more than 2500 a year. When twitted with his ministerial salary at a public meeting his happy knack of retort stood him in good stead "22,000 a year is the trade union rate for the job." he exclamed, "and I should be a blackleg if I accepted less."

The local government board is now a different place to what it was before Mr. Burns assumed control. No one can say that his increase in salary has not been earned. Under his strenuous way the old-time somnolence of Whitehall has dissapeared. The new form of government was established a very few days after Mr. Burns took office, The manner in which he made the change was quite characteristic of the man. One morning he stood in the hall, with his back to the fire and the change was quite characteristic of the man. One morning he stood in the hall, with his back to the fire and his hands in his pockets, watching the staff as they sauntered slowly in to work. When the last stragglers ap-peared, Mr. Burns called for the time books. A few minutes afterward the dilatory officials were summoned to the presence of the autocrat of Whitehall, and, a stern rebuke was administered. In plain, unvarnished terms, Mr. Burns told them that he expected every man to do his duty. 'You receive a good salary, wet or fine, sick or well," he sald in effect, "You know your proper hour to be at this office and the gov-ernment which pays a good wage, like-wise demands good service; what is more it intends to have it."-London Weekly Dispatch.
