In Which the People

MUST WORK FOR THE REST.

"We Are Servants and Not Masters, We Who Are or Have Been Engaged in Large Affairs."

Copywright, 1967, by the Cleveland Plaindealer.

Cleveland, Aug. 9 .- John D. Rocke feller, in discussing the recent speech of Judge Grosscup in which the latter declared that the wealth of the country was so widely distributed that It was really in the hands of the moderately well-to-do class, today said:

"They can hardly accuse Judge Grosscup of partially to corporations or railroads; he has hown very well indeed how widespiread is the damage resulting from the persecution through prejudice of the country's transportation lines. The same applies to thoughtless attacks on other lines of industry.
It is worse than thoughtless to say off hand that the wealth and the industries of the country are in the hands of a few rich men, who alone will suffer. There is a direct loss to thousands of frugal people who have invested small savings in these enterprises, and the indirect effect reaches still other thousands who depend, in one way or another, upon the success of every industry. The business of the country is interwoven until it's something like the circulation of the blood in the body.
An injury or an operation at one point species and weekens the whole? They can hardly accuse Judge Gross-An injury or an operation at one point shocks and weakens the whole."
Referring to the financial situation, Mr. Rockefeller said:
"Who is more interested in the material prosperity of this country than I am?"

EGGS NOT ALL IN ONE BASKET.

"My eggs are not all in one basket by any means. A good dear of nonsense is printed every now and then about my having captured all the railroads of the country or having moncepolized this or that. The truth is that I figure as an investor and stockholder rather than as a proprietor. But any depression is likely to mean a loss of values to me. The groceryman may not feel it if the coal business is bad, or the wheat grower suffer if the railroads lose, but the man with wider interests feels every phase of depression. I do not mean that I am in the grocery or coal or wheat business, but I am using this illustration. It is a fact that hardly any sort of business can experience dull times without loss to me. It should be plain, then, that I have the best right to be anxious for good times all around. Would I permit, then, any harm to come to any line of business if I could help it?"

HARNESSED TO A CART.

"I am harnessed to a cart in which the people ride," continued Mr. Rocke-feller. "Whether I like it or not, I must work for the rest. I can not evade this responsibility if I would. But I do not complain of this. I am willing to draw my share of the load as long as I am able.

"The first stop I took," he said. "meant obliging myself to workingmen who henceforward looked to me for employment and investors who put in their money and looked to me for results. At every stop forward the load was heavier. The workingmen numbered a few score first, and then a few hundreds, then thousands. There was a similar increase in the number of investors who could not myself, I had to work for them, whether or not, Today, retired from at the business retired, that is from whether or not. Today, retired from active business, retired, that is, from business for myself, the capital I have invested makes work for thousands and opens opportunities for thousands and opens opportunities for thousands of others to place their savings pro-tiably. No man with money can es-cape this responsibility or loosen this yoke from his neck.

SERVANTS NOT MASTERS.

"We are servants and not masters, we who are or have been engaged in large business affiairs. It is to our viwe who are or have been engaged to large business affairs. It is to our vital interest that the country prosper; that the people prosper. They can destroy us, or our business, or at least destroy our power of serving them. We would probably suffer the least. The richest men cat bub three meals a day, and it does not take a fortune to dress very well indeed, or to provide real luxury in living. The men who have acquired the largest fortunes have not pursued wealth, but business success. Had they desired money for the anjoyment of money they would have stopped far short of spending their lives, as they have, in the struggle that is business. The natural ambition of every man to make good provision for his family can be satisfied far short of the industrial world of today. But they continue to total at their desks because they have acclustered. continue to toll at their desks because continue to toil at their desks because they love achievement, for the keen delight in creating where nothing was, and sometime, I believe, people will be convinced that they are toiling for love of country as well."

When it comes to the attacks upon him and his associatese, Mr. Rockefeller shows himself the philosopher. Ho does not pretend to like the assaults, nor does he pretend to haughty indifference and he is not affected by flippancy in his comments. But he is not bitter toward those who assatt him pancy in his comments. But he is not bitter toward those who assail him He says it is a misunderstanding that will right itself in time. He frankly regrets it, but he seems ever more distressed at what he considers the danger of losing a good opportunity to capture the trade of the world than over the personal phase of the attacks.

"We are proud of our national sense of good humor," he remarked.

OUR FAMILY JARS. "If we must have little family jars If we must have little family jars among ourselves, should we let the outside world laugh at our angry faces? Why should we waste the energy we need to build up the country in tearing each other to pieces? If evils have crept in during the periods of marvelous development since the Civil war, and it is not impressible that some few and it is not impossible that some few have crept, can we not do away with them without destroying the whole fabric? Admitting, for the sake of argument, that the business world is a patient that needs treatment, must it be said of the results that the operation was successful; but the patient died?"

Mr. Rockefeller was asked why he did not run mway from the hue and cry that pursued him. He laughed.

"Perhaps because my favorite music is 'Yankee Doodle,'" he suggested.
Then more gravely: and it is not impossible that some is is "Yankee Doodie," he suggested. Then more gravely:

"I suppose I might have converted my interests into gold at one time and have taken my money to England or some pleasant part of Europe, where life is organized to make things comfortable for the man with money to spend. But, do you know that way of escape from the responsibilities and embarrassments that wealth brings to an American never occurred to me? The United States cannot develop enough frawbacks to make me lose the feeling that there is no place like home, and this is home, in what I firmly believe is the greatest country in the world."

ATTEMPTED MURDER MAY CLEAR UP MYSTERY.

Chicago, Aug. 10.-An attempt to Chicago, Aug. 10.—An attempt to murder a woman with a knife in her residence at 317 Aberdeen street last evening and the arrest of her alleged assailant may result in clearing two murder mysteries that have remained unsolved for many years. The statement of Mrs. Murray, 35 years old, who was found almost unconscious on the eidewalk in front of her house, it is thought possible that a prisoner held at the Maxwell street station may be charged with the death of a woman in Italy and that of a man in New York.

For five years Mrs. Murray has cared for the living rooms of her fellow tenant, James De Lara, who owns a grocery in another part of the building. Yesterday De Lara complained that she was not doing her work properly. An argument followed and De Lara, it is charged, attacked her with a large knife. The woman was cut several times before she field from the house. She fainted on reaching the street and was found suffering from loss of blood, by Policeman O'Connell. After receiving the attention of a physician. Mrs. Murray made a statement to Lieut, Thomas Coughlin concerning her assailant. "De Lara is not his right name," Mrs. Murray told the police. "He is known in Italy as Carlos Mastelene and he is wanted in Italy for the murder of a woman. He escaped from Italy and came to New York under the name of Charles De Lara. There he murdered a man at Canal and Front streets and came to murder a woman with a knife in her escaped from Italy and came to New York under the name of Charles De Lara. Thère he murdered a man at Canal and Front streets and came to Chicago. While in New York he owned the Hotel Calabro and catered to immigrant Italians."

To support her statements, Mrs. Murray said that De Lara, as he is known, had several scars on his body received in his fight with the man murdered in New York. On examination the police said they found the scars, but De Lara explained their presence by saying they were relics of a fight he had when he was a boy. Denial of both accusations was made by De Lara but he would not tell where he was at the time of the alleged murders.

The Italian consul and the New York nolice have taken up the investigation.

INDICTED CORPORATIONS.

Conviction Would Render Four Liable to Fine of $18,000,000.

ble to Fine of $18,000,000.

Jamestown, N. Y., Aug. 9,—Convictions on all the counts of the indictments returned today by the federal grand jury for western New York would render four corporations liable to fines aggregating $18,240,000.

Judge Hazel received the report late today from the jury's investigations of the government's charges against the Standard Oil company, the Vacuum Oil company, the New York Cantral and the Pennsylvania rallroads of giving and receiving special and illegal concessions on shipments of oil from Oilean, N. Y., to points in Vermont.

The report includes the presentation of two indictments against the Standard Oil company, two against the New York Central and Pennsylvania jointly and two against each of these railroads separately. One of the indictments against each corporation contains 188 counts and the other 40 counts.

STORY THAT QUANTRELL ALIVE ON VANCOUVER ISLE.

J. E. Duffy, a prominent timberman, who recently becaming interested in timber land at Quatsino, recognized John Sharp, who is over 70, wiry and gray, as Quantrell, Duffy having been a member of the Michigan troop of cavalry which cut

He made his way to South America, living a number of years in Chile, whence he went to Texas, where he engaged in the cattle business, making considerable money which he exhausted. Then he went to Oregon, where he punched cows and drove cattle over the mountains. From Oregon he came to British Columbia, nearly two decades ago, and engaged in logging at different camps of the northeast coast of Vancouver island until 10 years ago, when he became a trapper of the northern coast.

"There was only one trouble with them—they studied too hard and we had some difficulty in preyventing them from over doing. Their uppermost thoughts were of the day when they would have a hand in conducting affairs of their government. They are quieter than American college students and absence of cigarettes is noticeable in the Filipinos."

There grand juries have met since Dr. Paul was killed, and no indictment was returned against Judge Short until the third jury met.

They Buy, But Cannot Pay.

T one time those who came into daily contact with men and women shoppers had a good deal to saw about "extravagant spend-"foolish buyers" "wasteful mismanagers," Now they speak pityingly about the women who are a prev to the shopping microbe. "There is no other way to account for the vagaries by which they seem to be possessed," said a jewelry store clerk. The other day a story was printed about a well-dressed woman who went the rounds of leading jewelers having expensive trinkets sent C. O. D. to fictitious persons at fictitious addresses, When arrested she said she couldn't help it. Well, there isn't a store in this city that sells jewelry that couldn't tell offhand a dozen such stories, and dozens more about C. O. D.'s sent to persons with a bona fide address who dozens more about C. O. D.'s sent to persons with a bona fide address who promptly sent the goods back for some triffing reason or other. And the queer thing about it is that in no case was it a confidence game. Confidence games are in another class.

"These women were ladies—or seemed to be. None wanted to steal the piece of jewelry she selected, nor tried to make off with it. She simply had to buy it, even though she couldn't pay for it. There's no kleptomania or plain stealing about that. It's another sort of mania altogether.

"Shopping microbe? Exactly. It seems to be something that gets into the blood and plays the mischlef with women who haven't much spare cash.

"The other day two young women came in to look at neck chains, the kind that have a jeweled pendant attached. They were not expensively dressed and I wondered when I was asked to show chains that cost several hundred dollars each, but of course I had to trot them out. I kept a sharp eye on the tray though, and on the women who hung over the things comparing, praising and showing the keenest delight in handling them. Finally said one with a grand air: 'I will take this,' pointing to a $300 chain and pendant. These send it C. O. D.' I took her name and address and when the pair left the store quietly put the thing back in the case. No, I didn't even take the trouble to telephone, and I heard nothing more from the young woman. Had the transaction been O. K., she would have telephoned in a few hours asking indignantly—why the chain had not come."

Next to jewelry lingerie waists and silk stockings are most often ordered, with no intention of buying. In nearly every hosiery department at this season, the display includes fascinating examples in silk marked at a great bargain, sometimes as low as $1 a pair. Few women can resist them at that price.

The other day two stout women paused before one of these signs.

Few women can resist them at that price.

The other day two stout women paused before one of these signs, felt of the hosiery, exchanged approving nods and then as one was turning away, the other said hurriedly to the saleswoman: "I'll take six pairs; send them C. O. D." The saleswoman glanced at the customer—and the glance was eloquent. But without a word she wrote down the name and number given and took half a dozen pairs of stockings to send to the delivery room." ery room.
"They will be back tomorrow," she

"They will be back tomorrow," she answered in reply to a remark about plain looking persons buying expensive goods. "I often send stockings costing $25 a pair and more to be paid for on delivery knowing that they are certain to be returned. I don't dare refuse to send them, for one never can tell how much money a woman has to spend by the way she looks while shopping in hot weather.

"Most women love beautiful stockings—silk stockings in particular—and many can't seem to resist ordering some sent home C, O, D. This is done far oftener now than when I first came to this counter five years ago. In fact, at that time it never happened at all, so far as I can remember. It a new disease. I guess. A shopping michobe? Well, I shouldn't wonder."

A woman identified with the C. O. D. department of one of the large department stores can furnish the most convincing data respecting the finework for which the shopping microbe is responsible. She said:

"The stacks of lingeric waists and embroidered robes that pass through this department twice a day—when they go out and when they go out and when they come in again—go out and when they come in again-is astonishing. Most of them are of the costilest varieties. When the wagon boy tries to deliver the boxes the own-boy tries to deliver the boxes the owners are not at home, they are told, and there is no one on hand authorized to pay the bill, so of course the goods must come back.

"This sort of thing has come to such a pass here that during a special sale, when we have only a few of a certain variety of walsts in stock the sales-women are instructed to refuse to send them C. O. D., unless the buyer is known to be a regular customer of the house. I don't know what has gotten into shoppers of late, but whatever it is they don't seem to be responsible for it any more than a youngster is responsible for having earache or the measles.—New York Sun.
