gracious as illegical. Because a system of government is bad we should not be precluded from agitating for a change; and as the de-velopment, prosperity, and pro-gress of the Territories add to the wealth and prosperity of a common country, our people should be en-couraged in opening up and developing the great national domain, which is but in the infancy of the Ao. 65 East Temple St., development of its almost bounds resources, and should not discouraged from engaging in such a work by the thought that they will be punished for emigrating to and developing the great West by loss of the rights which every true American citizen believes to be his proudest heritage.

The nature of the public domain open to settlement has changed since the country from which the great States of the Northwest and Southwest were formed has been settled and occupied. The rich prairies settled so rapidly, that the territorial governments were in fact temporary, and but a means of organizing the first government, and of establishing the basis upon which they should be clothed with
