

FREEDOM—MY COUNTRY.

BY E. R. SNOW.

'Tis Freedom's glorious birthday
Beneath Columbia's sky.
All hail! Immortal Freedom, hail!—
She was not born to die.

She lives! But, where? There's madness
Upon our nation's brow,
With reeking, crimson wreaths entwined
O where is Freedom now?

Her path is on the mountains—
Her home, the vales below,
Where God's eternal Priesthood rules,
And Truth's pure currents flow.

War's bugle notes are sounding
Where once fair Freedom spread
Her banner forth—where now, in streams,
Fraternal blood is shed!

My Country, O my Country,—
My birth-place and my home;
Thou, thou hast done the fearful deed
That seal'd thy hast'ning doom!

Ere long, a land of widows
And orphans, thou wilt be:
A "MENE TEKEL" on thy wall,
Foretells thy destiny.

Thy gallant sons are dying—
Thy sons, by sons are slain:
Prayers, tears and sighs cannot recall
Them back to life again.

A hand reach'd forth to save thee,
Some twenty years ago;
But thou, with hellish anger spurn'd
That hand, and laid it low.

You screened the perpetrators—
You revel'd o'er the deed;
And God, in justice, mocks you now
In this, your time of need.

You broke the shield of Freedom,
And Freedom had to fly
For refuge to the mountain-tops,
Beneath the western sky.

By Truth and Justice cherished,
From here she will spread forth
Her glorious banner, and proclaim
Peace, Peace, to all the earth.

Then crown the day with honors,
And never, never cease
To decorate fair Freedom's brow,
With garlands gem'd with Peace.

EARTHQUAKE.—Br. John W. Snell, writing from St. George, Washington county, June 19, informs us that on the 15th ult. an earthquake scared some of the inhabitants of that city out of their houses; it was estimated to have lasted between one and two minutes, with a gentle, swaying motion; no damage.

He also states that barley, oats and some wheat were being harvested, but there would not be enough to supply them until another harvest.

POLICE.—Richard Maxfield was fined $10. last week for assaulting Daniel Grenig.

The two boys for fighting on the Fourth were fined $5 each.

—When a gloom falls upon us, it may be we have entered into the cloud that will give us gentle shower to refresh us.
