Special Correspondence.
 Provo, March 17.—At the meeting of the city council last evening, Mayor Decker presented itemized estimates of costs of the construction of electric light plant at the North fork of Provo canyon and at the North fork of Provo canyon. The estimates were prepared under the direction of Mr. L. L. Nunn. The cost of a plant at the North fork of Provo canyon would be $102,000, or 182 per horse power. The cost of a plant at the mouth of the canyon of 1,400 horse-power capacity would cost $117,500, or 84 per horse power. The question of the water was the most necessary improvement for the city—an electric light plant or the improvement of the waterworks system—was discussed, together with the bond limit of the city. Mayor Decker said he believed the bond limit is about $176,000, and that before the money will be needed bonds can be issued for $200,000. He rather favored the improvement of the waterworks system first, and suggested that money might be secured from public spirited citizens for the erection of an electric light plant. The whole matter was finally referred to the committee on electric light, the committee on waterworks and the mayor for investigation.

He wrote to the "house" she alleged she represented which was the St. Louis Soap and Grocery company of St. Louis, but the letter was returned as undelivered and the supposition is that the "house" is a myth.
