Ore in transit

$ 436,883.84

$ 436,883.84 It will be seen from the financial statement that while the dividends or-dered paid yesterday will make a big hole in the reserves, there will be a large accumulation of surplus through ore shipments for the present month to add to the nearly $62,000 that is still on hand, or will be when the ore in transit is paid for. It is simply impossible to give much of a notion of what the mines look like today in the brief space here utilized, neither is it possible to give the amount of gold, silver, lead and cop-per produced by the mines, as those figures do not enter into the reports that have been tabulated. To under-stand all the good features of the re-port it is necessary to have all the tables for reference and the splendid maps that show the underground workings, and which accompany the report. After dealing with the geological workings, and which accompany the report. After dealing with the geological formation of the district and after describing the various vein systems that are found within the boundaries of the company's 2,115 acres of min-eral-bearing territory, which covers the strike of the ore-bearing contact and fissures for a distance of 19,000 feet, Captain MacVichle has the following to say in a general way of the comto say in a general way of the com-pany's undeveloped area:

M'CORNICK CROSS-CUT.

"The McCornick cross-cut driven southeasterly from the Silver King shaft on the 1,100-foot level is mostly in quartzite, probably 300 feet or more below the lime-quartzite contact. It below the line-quartzite contact. It intersects a number of fissures, also several porphyry dykes. The most promising of these fissures is encoun-tered near the end of the crosscut. For a distance of 120 feet at this point the territory is well mineralized, contain-ing manganese and oxide of iron, and has two well defined fissures with a large porphyry dyke at station 709. I am of the opinion if raises were put up on some of the most favorable fis-sures to reach the contact, the possibil-ities for finding ore are easily traced ore-bearing fissures are easily traced for a long distance west within the territory owned by this company.
