

AMERICANS' DEVOTION TO WIVES REBUKE TO KING

The consideration shown by the great men of this country toward their wives is in striking contrast to King Edward's neglect of his queen as described in recent dispatches from London. Andrew Carnegie's devotion to his wife has won the admiration of two continents. They are almost inseparable, whether it be in his New York palace or in his castles at Skibo, or hobnobbing with the mighty.

President Roosevelt's home life is an example for King Edward. Few other men of his impulsiveness, his incessant energy, his boundless love of life and action, have displayed at the same time such a truly domestic character. To him Mrs. Roosevelt is and always will be the first lady in the land.

William H. Taft peculiarly demonstrated his regard for his wife in his recent trip around the world. Mrs. Taft accompanied him. Everywhere she shared his honors. Their home life is ideal.

William J. Bryan frankly admits that his wife is a trifle more than his better half. She, too, accompanied him in a trip around the world. She accompanies him on every important trip he makes. She is his guiding star, he declares.

J. Pierpont Morgan recently gave away his famous kennels of high-bred collies which had cost him $1,000,000, because their barking annoyed Mrs. Morgan, and she objected to the constant incursions of visitors who called at their beautiful Highland Falls estate to inspect them.

Henry C. Frick of Pittsburgh, millionaire steel and coke man, who, with the Mellons, Pittsburgh bankers, controlled the A. Overholt Distilling company, one of the largest in the country, disposed of his productive interest in the concern because Mrs. Frick, an earnest temperance worker, objected to his being in the whisky business.

John D. Rockefeller seldom makes a trip unaccompanied by Mrs. Rockefeller. Always he shows her unceasing attention.

GOOD MACKEREL ABUNDANT.

Boston reports are to the effect that never was the catch of mackerel so large and never were the fish so heavy. Prices have gone down to the lowest figure in many years, so that nature's great law of compensation is working admirably. There is a shortage in bullocks and sheep and an increase in the number of fish in the market. It is the opinion of Gloucester that there will be more salt mackerel put up this year than for a long time and that the prices will be low, which will be good news for those who like this sort of food for breakfast. The way of the fish in the sea has been a problem since long before the days of Solomon, who gave it up as one of the four great problems of life. It seems to have been forgotten by many persons that immediately after the discovery of America and the failure to find India with gold in abundance the nations of the world looked upon the fisheries of the Grand Banks and vicinity as worth more than anything else in the situation. The Spaniards kept up hunting gold and silver and did manage to secure a great amount, which was of no ultimate benefit to them. But the French and the English almost from the beginning went after the mackerel and codfish which were so plentiful along the "Banks," and in succeeding centuries the right to fish and to cure fish on the shores of adjacent islands became prominent. In the last few years, for reasons unknown, mackerel have not been abundant in the regular fishing grounds and the price in all markets has gone up. This is probably not due to the fact that the fish are any fewer, but because they have sought other quarters. The spawning grounds are always the place for fishermen, but it seems certain that the greater number of sea fish spend most of their time in the deep waters where they cannot be secured. Our shad, which we prize so highly, develop somewhat in the Atlantic in deep waters, but no one has yet found their habitat. It is supposed to be at least a mile below the surface and probably 1,000 miles or more from shore. They come to fresh waters to spawn, which is not the case with the cod or the mackerel and other fish. It is encouraging that nature at this time when meat is so dear should give us plenty of sea food. The use of fish for food in this section is not so great as would be of advantage to health and economy.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

It's time to buy Blankets!

OUR ANNUAL AUGUST Blanket and Comfort

Sale Begins Monday

WE SELL MORE BLANKETS & COMFORTS IN MIDSUMMER THAN DURING ANY OTHER TIME OF YEAR

Seems strange, doesn't it that people should fill cold weather needs in midsummer? Must be a reason. There is—AND A MIGHTY GOOD ONE.

DURING THIS AUGUST BLANKET SALE WE SELL GOOD BLANKETS AND COMFORTS, FRESH, SWEET, SOFT, WARM, FULL-SIZED AT LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR.

We buy blankets and comforts ahead of the season—stacks and stacks of them—when manufacturers most need orders to keep their help at work—and secure big price concessions by so doing. In turn we are able to offer our customers extraordinary price inducements to buy bed coverings for Fall and Winter in Midsummer.

Beyond the price savings to be gained, other advantages of buying now are fresh, clean stocks and generously complete varieties from which to make your selection.

But this explanation is hardly necessary. Our August Blanket and Comfort Sale is so widely known and eagerly awaited that the mere announcement that it is ready is enough to bring hundreds of housekeepers hurrying to our Blanket Section.
