THE DEPENDENT CHILD NEEDS A MOTHER.

It is a dull, stolid indifference engendered by absence of affection that slumbers like dangerous dynamite within the institutional child, says Mabel Potter Daggett, discussing this question in the Delinquent. At first when nobody cares for him, he is only sad. Later, when he cares for nobody, he is unsafe. Society finds him no when later it gets him on its hands as an adult criminal. That is the future before an alarming proposition of institutional children. Another alarming proposition drift out to the world to produce more dependent children, and then at last get themselves in line for the almshouse. These things have been happening right along, in spite of the fact that there have been diligent state boards of charities and committees of inspection to see that the steam-heating, check-aproning, clothing-room, bathing process in the children's homes were all correct. Then at last the sociologist and the child culturists, many of them learned men wearing out glasses, got together to see what the situation today they have seem to look in the eyes of the child.

Superintendents and matrons and boards of managers and trustees, please stand aside! There is one who can laugh at all of your methods. It is she who can sing soft, crooning songs with a little head cradled on her breast; who can answer all foolish questions like "Why does flies walk on the wall?" and "Why isn't the grass purple?" who can kiss like nobody else will ever be able to kiss; who is so near the divine truth in her wonderful nature that she can work miracles in child training where all the institutional specialists fail.

Oh, the sociologists have studied carefully the exhibit in the institutions where these 100,000 children wait. Upstairs and down through miles of polished corridors they have traveled. And, having seen the look that can only be loved away. "Gentlemen, what the dependent child most needs is a mother!"

Less than 5 per cent of all the millions of school children in the United States ever reach the secondary school, says Rheta Childe Dorr, in the same magazine, and it is safe to say that not more than 25 per cent of the whole number ever go above the fifth grade. That is to say, of the 23,795,723 children enrolled in 1907, at least 18,000,000 will leave school between the fifth and sixth grades.

A report of the United States commissioner of education issued in 1901,

A SMART FROCK FOR BRIDGE.

Some of the smart tailored three-piece suits have a bodice and skirt which, when the handsome coat is removed, make a complete and dainty frock for luncheons, afternoon bridge and similar occasions. Such a little frock, shown here, has the high skirt and a small bodice built over a net gimp—popular style this year. The oversleeve of cloth is a smart French notion, and is a bit warmer than the tulle sleeve of transparent fabric.

announced the engagement of their daughter, Nora Mignon, to William H. Russell.

Mrs. Edward G. Roberts was guest of honor at a delightful bridge tea on Monday, given by Mrs. Roscoe M. Breeden, five tables being played and the hostess being assisted by Mrs. J. H. Sturk and Mrs. J. Daly.

The rooms were decorated in holly wreaths and red bells and the dining room was especially pretty with its table spread with a chumy lace cloth over red satin, and a tiny Christmas tree as a centerpiece, with red-shaded candelabra at either side end. Prizes were won by Mrs. A. S. Bower, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Elbridge Thomas and the Misses Rae and Olive Bartch.

Lieut. and Mrs. Clark R. Elliott entertained at dinner at the post yesterday.

Lieut. and Mrs. Gustave A. Weiser entertained at dinner yesterday, covers being laid for about a dozen friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Butler announce the engagement of their daughter Alice M. to Robert G. Alford, the marriage to take place early in 1909.

A telegram was received here Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. W. E. Farr, announcing the marriage at San Bernardino, Cal., Dec. 25, of Miss Grace Griffin of Bozeman, Mont., and W. C. Blyth of Evanston, Wyo., brother of Mrs. J. T. Keith of this city and son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blyth, prominent in Evanston. Many friends here will be interested in the wedding. After a short stay in Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Blyth will be at home to their friends at their orange ranch just out of Los Angeles.

people, for whom the public schools exist, they left school with minds practically void of knowledge. Most of them could barely read and write, and not one of them had been taught anything that would even remotely or indirectly help him to earn a decent living.

Think what this means industrially! It means that every year millions of American boys and girls—for all grow up to be Americans, no matter what they were born—are sent out wherever workers are needed—to factories, to trades, to commerce, to all industries, as ignorant and helpless as kittens! They are turned out into the world of fierce competition utterly unfit to compete, into a world of splendid opportunities, without the training or the intellectual power to enable them to take advantage of these opportunities.

Is it strange that skilled workmen are so few, or that the unskilled, low-waged occupations are so overcrowded, or that our armies of unemployed are larger every time hard times bring them into notice?

FASHIONS IN HATS.
The subject of hats is one that is likely to create envy, hatred and malice and all uncharitableness among women who are not in the position to indulge their love of the beautiful, for the new hats are really lovely and much to be desired. Their shape is likely to prove trying until the culture is adapted to them, for they are entirely guileless of bandeaux—setting, in consequence very close to the head and very nearly concealing the hair. Felt is relegated almost entirely to morning wear; and for occasions of ceremony satins, failles and ottoman will be the accepted headgear.

Most of the shapes give the effect of excessive flatness, but in reality most of them show a downward sweep of the brim suggestive of an inverted soup plate, or an upward sweep at the side, or the order of the old Gainsborough hat. The fancy of fading that hat brim with some contrasting color is a happy one, for it permits the wearing of the most trying of the new colors, allowing one's own color to come next the face.

Take for example, the new amethyst—a most wonderful color, much duller than the name amethyst implies, and more suggestive of charcoal morte, or dead thistle. It is a color that is extremely flattering to some and equally damaging to others.

Another color that is most beautiful to look at, but not always possible to wear unrelieved, is the old-time lute color, which is neither gray nor fawn, but a mixture of both. It is very lovely faced with peach color in a re-creation of one of the Directoire shapes—a wide scoop brim tied under the chin with ribbons, and a high crown trimmed at one side with a cockade of ostrich plumes.

It is worth remarking that the hats this year are in close keeping with the gowns and coats—a gratifying condition of affairs that does not always exist in the world of fashions. Only too often hats of one period are worn with gowns of another in a totally irrelevant manner. But this season the modistes and couturiers have worked together with remarkable unanimity, and the result is very pleasing.

THE EMBROIDERED ROBE OF LACE.

The robe dresses, always popular because of the ease with which they may be turned into handsome costumes, are shown in this year in fine nets, elaborately embroidered with colored silk motifs. On this exquisite robe the embroidery is done in shaded berry tones, the satin sash and bands being in a subdued fruit tone which harmonizes with the embroidery. The bands across the sleeve are caught by small velvet flowers in berry pink.

of interesting events are planned for next week.

On Monday night Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Critchlow entertained at an elaborate dinner in honor of Mr. Critchlow's birthday anniversary, about 30 being present. The table was laid in the form of a T and had for a centerpiece a miniature tree, elaborately decked in cotton to represent snow and ornaments. Silver candelabra were at each end and sprays of holly strewn in cotton to represent snow and other ornaments. Silver candelabra were at each end and sprays of holly strewn over the cloth, while all about were Christmas bells and holly and evergreen. The place cards were also hand painted in holly and bells. An orchestra furnished a delightful program of music during the dinner, and afterward also, when games were played. Covers were laid for Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Snow, Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Snow, Mrs. and Mrs. L. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Savage, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Ellerbeck, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Daynes, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Hutchins, Col. and Mrs. A. D.
