

REFEREE DECLARED A FOUL.

In Early Days Fighters Did Not Demand a Million Dollars But Fought for $200.

It probably is not generally known that the longest fight under London prize ring rules fought in this country took place in Maine on Dec. 4, 1860, and that James O'-Neil of Worcester, Mass., and James Fitz-gerald of Providence, R. I., were the rincipals, says George Siler, the veteran eferce. The men had local reputations as fighters, but of the two O'Neil was con-sidered the cleverer. However, Fitz's ad-sidered the eleverer. However, Fitz's ad-mirera thought his hitting abilities would more than oriset O'Nell's science, so they matched him for 500. The battle was good in spots only, some of the rounds being stabers, while others were made up of two much stallag. "The second round vecupied one hour and ten minutes--4 theyane session for the second round vecupied one hour and ten minutes--4 theyane session for the second round vecupied one hour and ten minutes--4 theyane session for the second round and Fitz scored the first round, and Fitz scored the first knockdown in the sev-enth. After that upset O'Nell depended on his footwork and his elever long-range fighting to win the money, but Fitz was game, took all O'Nell could hand out to him, hoping to score a punch that would end the fight. He landed quite a num-ber of hard ones, and several times had his opponent on the verge of a knockout, but the rest between rounds and O'Neil's ercelent condition prolonged the fight. but the rest between rounds and O'Neil's ercellent condition prolonged the fight in the sixty-sixth session O'Neil's oright and left, fell forward from the force of his blows, and in se doing grasped Fitz about the legs. The latter's seconds immediately claimed foul, which the refare allowed and declared Fitz-gerald the winner after four hours and twenty minutes of fighting. The day before that long drawn out battle Billy (Noby) Clark, who defeated Jimmy Ellott a few months previous, and henny Horrigan came together near Weehawken, N. J., to light for a side bet of $200.

Jimmy Elliott a few months previous, and Denny Horrigen came together near Weehawken, N. J., to fight for a side bet of $200. There was so much prominence given the mill and the location of the battle ground that these directly concerned were compelled to speak out of town minus the ropes and stakes, which neces-sitated the ring being formed by the spectators. Clark was looked fairer by Filly Donnelly and Hen Winkle, while Hary Labarus and Johnny Monaghan looked after the wants of Denny. This also was a long grawn out affair, the fight lastling three hours and fitteen minutes. This because of Clark's de-rensive tactles, He was coaled to make a waiting fight of H, and this prolonged a number of the rounds, making them tedious to the crowd. Clark, however, was the more scienced, and pecked Den-ny's head and body with unerting lefts. Besides, he had one of Denny's syes closed as fight as a drum and was mak-ting sy for the other "peeper" when Horrigan's seconds, seeing he had no chance to win, threw up the sponse in token of defeat. The crowd got a good run for its money that day, as immediately the ring was cleared. Johnny Hickey and George Morton stepped into the creek and began is than the big event, as they went at H hammer and torks. Mickey had the better of the milling in had that the sixteenth sceled and began is the dong with the fick boy went at H hammer and torks. Mickey had the better of the milling in had Morton followed this advantage he strely would have scored a victory, but the gang was with Elickey, and, as be thought more of his life than of the pair yours, he gave Johnny time to re-cover from the effects of the blow. They have the shorek all the fight out of him, the dong until the twenty-seventh round with Morton having the better of the pair word in whenever he crowed pressed upon him whenever he crowed pressed upon him whenever he crowed pressed the previous May, were bought together at Weehawken, N. J. on Dec. 5 for a subscribed pures of $300. The was the previous May, were bought of the journey across che natched fighters have it out. King came to this country with a reputation of being a good fighter, but he did not demonstrate it against Woods, as he jought shy of him and resorted to bropping, hoping thereby to win the fight on a foul. He went down susp-clously on more than one occasion, and by his tricky tactics and better knowl-dge of the fine points of the game had the upper hand in the sarity rounds. He have Woods clevely in the third rend, and was aw A ed first blood in the fourth. Woods and not get to going ntil the minth round, in which he scored is clean knockdown, and thereafter re-peated the trick times without number. King played the dropping game after twoods goi him on the run, and in the fity-sixth round, after being forced into his corner, he dropped again without re-relying a blow, and the caim of foul was allowed. Jack argued on hebait of Heenan and Billy took the Mitrissey end, and, as neither would budge, they agreed to fight it cut. A coay back room in the Eleventh ward, New York was secured, and a se-lect crows of points was on hand to side fair play. Jack, being at least twenty pounds the heavier and with a fair imattering of how to hit and get away. was considered a sure winner, but when, after fighting ten rounds according to the milling, he began fighting foul. Hilly's friends interfered, but Billy begged them to "Keep hands off, stating he could lick the big "stiff" at any kind of goins. The followed the rough-house work. Jack, being the stronger, wrestled Billy to the floor and attarted gouging out one of Henshaw's eyes. The latter then man-smouth and began chewing on it like a hungy dog. Neither man squealed, not did the erowd make any attompt to sep-arate them. A few minutes of that sort of fighting found Hilly binnus an eye and jack minus a thumb. MODEL FOR INGERSOLL STATUE.

The picture shows the model of the statue of Robert G. Ingersoli ordered by the Ingersoli Monument association of Peoria, ill, and recently finished in clay. It will be cast in bronze in New York and will be set up in Peoria on the antiversary of the noted agnostic's death, July 21. The statue is one-third larger than life and represents the famous lawyer standing in a natural pose and clad in ordinary clothing. These who have seen the model testify to the redshift of the likeness.

The Law.

Once apon a time a would-be fight pro-motor prepared to hand to the Provo fight fors a lemon in the shape of a match be-tween a couple of dubs. The sheriff took it into his head to stop the bout. The promoter let out a mountful wail and protested that the bout was not to be a prizefield.

protected that the boit was not to be a prizedight. "This affair is simply a boxing match, not a prizedight," said he. "Well." said the sheriff, "If it's a boxing match it's a fake, and if it's a vrizedight it's agin' the law and the thing don't go." And it difin t. With reference to a proposed bout, light or contest, planned to take place here, the county attorney, Willard Hanson, says that if it's to be a prizedight it's aginst the law, and will not be permitted. If it is to be merely a boxing match it is up to the fight fams. Do they want to pay out cash to see an exhibition." If the affair is simply a sparing exhibition why are the men advertised as professional fighters and why are they training so strenuously?

READJUSTMENT OF LETTER CARRIERS' SALARIES

LUA

Washington, March 20.-Steps are now under way in the general land office to cancel the proofs by which Gov, Coe I. Crawford of South Da-kota obtained possession of certain public lands in that state. This state-ment was made today by Secy, Gar-field of the department of the interior, called forth by the charges against Gov. Crawford recently published in the Con-gressional Record by Representative Mann of Illinois. The secretary says criminal prosecutions are now barred in this transaction by the statute of limitations, and all that can be done is to restore the land to the public do-maia. This action, he predicts, will be taken.

main. This action, he predicts, will be taken. The charge of Represensative Mann is that Crawford paid young men in his comploy to make the entry on cer-tain land which was fenced in by him as a part of his cattle ranch; that the entrymen stayed on the land in ques-tion but one night when the entry was made, and one other night when the proving up time came. Seey. Garfield says: "Criminal prosecutions in the case are now barred by the statute of limi-tations. The cancellation process, how-ever, upon which the inquiry started is now under way in the general land of-fice to take that action. This appears to be all that can be done in the mat-ter."
