Pleasing Summarization of the Exploitation of Commercial Club Work.

MANY GOOD SPEECHES MADE.

Er-Governor Wells Was Toastmaster And Responses Covered a Wide and Interesting Range of Expression,

At the Commercial club banquet last night in celebration of the successful armination of the "See America Conterence" the confessions of delegates were many, and they all served to indicate that the movement is a pooling of issues which singly have been fought for by many live thinkers of the west. The banquet will long be remembered by those who were there as being an outflow of American thought and principles seldom before suggested and principle's schuhering. The gospel in a Salt Lake gathering. The gospel of seeing America, that Americans may know their country, and learn how to appreciate what it stands for, was preached.

was preached. It was asserted that a new civiliza-tion is due to grow in the west,—a civ-lization of square living and big achievements. The day of graft is dead, it was declared, and a type of cithen is being made in the west who will live for his country instead of for his party machine, and the state will ensequently soon cease to be loot for consequently soon cease to be loot for penceratic grafters or Republican rafters, just which ever happens to get ts hands on the coin.

DREAMING BIG DREAMS.

The See America movement seemed phave appealed to a class of men who dream large and hope for much in the gream large and hope for inter in the country's future, for in their confu-sions which were often much on the heartto-heart order, they told how it made them better Americans to stand face to face with the great mountains, or to look up into the skies at the foor-the circle stand face with the great mountains. the giant Sequoias, and to ride meward into the harbors of Puget f the giant ound and see Mount Tacoma rising Sound and see about factoma fixing like a guardian mother behind the roast towns. Their message to the east was that the west had that within it which would make them expand till the flag meant more than ever they ow realized.

BRILLIANT SPEECHES.

Some of the speeches were witty, some exceedingly patriotic, and one,-upat of Fisher Harris carried with it a meaning of what the west can do which was perhaps in a deeper vein han most of the speakers reached. Mr. Harris comes from Virginia, and as some of the speakers had mentioned the rebels and the unconverted southd, Harris sketched briefly his early s in Virginia where the country was devastated with war that most of e people were camping out for lack houses, and everywhere were motas weeping for their husbands and er firstborn. "Then," continued Mr. ams, "because of the great west, and boundless territory, and its free-m of thought and hope, I learned to w that Abraham Lincoln was the atest man that ever lived, and what at he preserved in holding the

SONG AND STORY.

Mrs. Nellie Druce Pugsley rendered "Bonnie Sweet Bessie" in pleasing style, and on being recalled gave "Within a Mile O' Edinboro Toon," much to the delight of all present. A number that convulsed the audience was "The Twa Courtins" by Miss Lillian Hunter, who also recited in response to an encour Courtins" by Miss Lillian Hunter, who also recited in response to an encore, "Aboot Half Past Ten." The toast "Robert Burns" brought forth an in-teresting review of the poet's life and character from President J. T. Kings-bury of the University of Utah. Prof. Kingsbury quoted freely from the poet's works showing bla laws for humerities works, showing his love for humanit which was one of his uppermost traits of character. Continuing, he said:

, TRIBUTE TO BURNS.

Burns was intensely human and trongly subject to all the feelings and emotions that make for the genuine brother, son, lover, husband and fath-er, being full of the highest instincts of a manly man, yet not irresistible at times to the extreme poetic and rhyth-mic longings of the loving instincts or all that is human. He touches earthly nature with his pathetic, human feelings and actions, and reaches forth up to God through his keen and pure phil-osophic intellect and in innocent sim-plicity and truth, laying bare his own folbles and mistakes. Robert Burns was simple, handsome, kind, unpretentious, open, keen of in-tellect, philosophic and a charming companien with a poetic, innocent, rhythmic soul. He was magnetic, ex-tremely attractive and fascinating. His charm of conversation was so great that the Duchess of Gordon said it took her off her feet. Scotch maldens lost defied him. After quoting Carlyle's beautiful tri-bute to the poet, Prof. Kingsbury concluded:
