THE WRONG MAN.

"An innocent man need never be afraid to face a jury," he spoke a young lawyer but lately admitted.

"Well," said I, from a layman's standpoint of law. "I think that if I thought the chances against me, no matter how in earnest I were, I would decline the honor."

I had just dropped in for a friendly chat and smoke with my friend, Richard Boyle-ton, and the young lawyer will know him as an Alaska climate craving giant and quiet old knickerbocker bachelor. Turning to him, I said as I lighted a cigar, "What say you, Dick?"

"In theory I agree with my young friend, in practice, with you. I'll give you a case in point, if you like.

It was about ten years ago when I was accused almost 24 hours in the morning by a newspaper from a police court, the bearer of a hastily scribbled note from one of the chief of police. He was a childless widower, much interested in Egyptology, and consequently spent much of his time in Egypt. Being rich, he could afford this expensive hobby.

"The note I received ran:

"Come down here. They have brought us quite new an some prompt charge or other. Come and arrange for my release instanter. Why.

R. Bowley.

"I hastened to the relief of my client. Now I must tell you he was very fastidious in his dress and particularly nattv and trim in his appearance. He was a dandy head, cut in complex fashion.

Judge, then, of my astonishment when I was shown a man dressed in a portion very fanny style of the kind affected by the sporting fraternity—a check cutaway coat, save for an inch or two of his waistcoat.

"Ah, Bowley, get you out of this quick."

"There is some mistake," I said to the policeman.

"How?" asked he.

"Why, this is not Mr. Bowley. This is not the gentleman I came to see.

"That so? Well, this is the man who gave me the note I sent up to you.

"At this I looked up at the man before me and said:

"What made you use Mr. Bowley's name?"

"He chunked me by the shirt and gasped out:

"Why, man, what do you mean? Do you claim so after me? Speak!

"I looked at him very keenly, and gradually them dawned on me that, after all, this was my old friend Bowley.

"Heavens! Is it you, Bowley? What are you doing here? Come, man, compose yourself and let's get at the bottom of this.

"I sat down on the bench by the side, but notwithstanding my cross questioning all I could get from him was nothing more than that he had arrived the previous evening in New York, had dropped a room at a hotel, had had some Welsh rabbit and a bottle of ale and had gone straight to bed. About midnight he had been aroused by a violent knocking at the door and on opening it had been gruffly told that he was under arrest, and that he was to dress pretty quickly.

"Hurried by the officers, he had hastily dressed himself, protesting meekly that the clothes he was handed him were not his, and was hurried off to the station.

"No amount of cross questioning could get him to vary or enlarge his story, nor would he give me the slightest reason for his arrest. As to his beard, that had early been explained in answer to a question of mine. Owing to a slight skin irritation contracted in Egypt, he had it shaved off some time ago.

"The next step was to get him bailed out. This, I found, was not so easy a task.

"My non-recognition at two of my friend was against him. The police justice took strong ground that this prisoner was a confidence man wanted for tattoos of fraud, and that he was a certain Wilcox, alias Bowley, alias Fabre, alias Morton, and sedlingly declared he would not let him out under $5,000 bail.

"I did not stop to argue the matter out, but in less than an hour was back with a couple of friends of well known wealth and standing.

"Said morning my client was in a state of love. I really put a certificate from my physician exaggerating the illness.

"He remained in my house and in bed for nearly a week. During that time I found out enough to solve the mystery to my mutual satisfaction, but not enough to convince a jury of even my own opinion. The solution of the mystery was this:

The man with many aliases had come up the same train as my friend Bowley, had registered at the same hotel and had been assigned a room on the same narrow corridor. By some chance my friend, after supper, had been given the key of Mr. Wilcox's room and had gone straight to bed.

Mr. Wilcox's keen mind, ever bent on securing up his trail so as to baffle that he had been given the wrong key, and nothing, examined my friend's valise, and then his idea evidently came to him that it would be a good thing if he could pass out of the hotel as Mr. R. Bowley.

The probability was that he (Bowley) was in his room. To open the door was no easy trick for the crook. Then he must have taken my friend's attire, leaving his in its place. The officers, he paid his bill as Mr. Bowley, saying he was going to catch the 11:30 p. m. night express for Syracuse and so vanished.

His resemblance to Wilcox's attire was so like the photos sent on to the people, and so unlike his own photos, that, with the corroborative evidence of the valise and note which Wilcox had, either in haste or intentionally, left in the coat and vest pocket, and which the police at the station had seized when they had searched him, I should stingily felt the chances were all in favor of a speedy conviction.

"What did you do?" asked the young lawyer.

"What did I do?" you ask. "I managed him on a two to one and won a verdict all the half. He was, as I said, a rich man. It was the simplest way out of the difficulty and the surest. Still my client, though properly discharged, is now a fugitive from justice."—Exchange.

Tartar Medicine.

Formerly musk was used as a medicine in various parts of the world, but history in civilized lands no one will look in high regards. In China it is still supposed to be a very good medicine, but the Chinese have queer notions about cures and charms. Abbe Hue, a distinguished traveler, says that when a Tartar doctor finds himself without his usual remedies he is apt to bleed his enchantment. He writes the names of the needed drugs on slips of paper, and these, being rolled up in little balls, are swallowed by the sick man. "To swallow the name of a remedy or the remedy itself," say the Tartars, "comes to precisely the same thing."—Rush Brooks in St. Nicholas.

An Alcove Salt Works.

Kanosheo's is one of the salt making villages; a sandy clay is dug out of the morning and placed in grass baskets. Water poured on this dissolves the salt. The strong brine thus made is then given into a trough, after which it is boiled and strained, and a fine, large crystal salt is obtained. It is a great trade in this part of the world. All villages make salt, which is put on to trade about the inches in diameter by four feet long. All these people, the Watusis, are very active. Most of them hail you with, "Morning," they do not seem able to manage the "good."—"Three in the Heart of Africa" in Century.

They Were All Losers.

"Oh, I wonder whose pocketbook this is?" said a man, stooping down and picking a wallet out of the gutter.

Immediately a crowd gathered.

"Who lost a pocketbook?" he asked.

"About 10 out of a crowd of 20 immediately spoke up and said that they had been so unfortunate.

"Tell what kind of one is it?" asked the finder of the man nearest him.

A detailed description followed, and still another and another, but the real owner did not materialize.

"It's a funny thing," finally said the man who had found the pocketbook, "that there should be so many people here together who had lost pocketbooks."—Louisville Commercial.

The Way Out of It.

A lover of tobacco once asked an old negress, who was smoking in the pipe, if she thought she was a Christian.

"I spects I is," was her reply.

"Do you expect to go to heaven?"

"Yes, indeedy."

"But the Bible says nothing useless shall enter there. Now, the breath of a smoker is useless. What do you say to that?"

"Well, I reckon I leave it' heef behin' when I enters dar."—Washington Times.

Wine.

In making glue break the sheets into small pieces, cover them with strong vinegar and let them soak a few hours. Then heat to boiling. When the glue becomes cold, it should be like a jelly. When the glue is to be used, the vessel containing it should be placed in a dish of boiling water to soften the glue.

The wheat of southern countries contains more albuminoids than that grown in temperate or northern zones, and hence is better suited for the manufacture of macaroni.

WHY LADIES LIKE COFFEE.

Though Many Admit It Hurts Them.

Many ladies have a great a liking for coffee for breakfast that the most severe fits and unsavory without it, but the strong coffee, which is admitted a sure accompaniment, is a great trial and the question is seriously discussed many and many times over in one's mind, whether it is possible to get over the coffee and give it up entirely.

The discovered stomach and liver troubles bring on many serious troubles, so that the use of coffee is the only one relief, it contains the same poisonous alkaloids as tobacco, strychnine and morphine, Stimulant is in volume. Of course the delicious not food-drink, Postum Cereal, it would not never mind the coffee. It has even the deep-seated taste of Mocha and takes on the rich golden brown of old Java when cream is added. It is made by the Postum Cereal Co. Limited, Battle Creek, Michigan, purely and wholly of the nourishing grain interests of the Cereals, including wheat, with the digestive salts as well just as strong coffee in reaction in Postum.

Nature quickly recovers when coffee is left off and the delicious food-drink used in its place. Health at once is again enjoyed and nerves, stomach, liver, bowels and heart cease their complaining when the distressing cause is withdrawn.

There are great big five cents worths in a package of Postum at Keyser who gives the exquisite fun of being generally well.

Beware of the fraudulent imitations of the original Postum Cereal Guide to Health, sent free. Address as above.
