A Little Girl Attacked by Six Wolves in California.

BRUTAL AFFAIR AT WARNER.

Telegraph Poles Ripped to Pieces by Lightning — Crops in Colorado.

A sandstone quarry of some value has been discovered at Seattle, Wash.

Four or five telegraph poles about five miles from Elko on the Tuscarora (Nev.) road were struck by lightning Saturday and knocked into toothpicks.

Dr. Arthur W. Bell, formerly a druggist of Utah, later a resident of Idaho and more recently of Texas, was drowned in the Little river near Denison, Tex., on July 13th. Before leaving Utah his store was burned out.

The Fort Collins (Colo.) Express states that J. H. Howe, T. C. Hume and J. L. Night ngale, have just returned from a prospecting and fishing trip over on the Laramie river. They had good success fishing and report that the Forrester gold discovery is attracting much attention.

Although the river is lined with trees, yet it is impossible to enjoy the shade of them for the reason the railroad bridge leading to the upper island is guarded by a soldier who will let no one pass, and the lower one cannot be reached on account of water.—Green River (Wyo.) Star.

James L. Whitton, foreman of the Journal printing office at Lompoc, Cal., was shot on Monday night by William Sheen, who is now in jail. Whitton is expected to die any moment. Previous to the shooting the men quarreled in a saloon over money matters finally coming to blows. In this Sheen was worsted. Sheen went out, procured a pistol and returning shot Whitton. Sheen was once marshal and deputy sheriff at this county seat.

Farmers on the Arkansas, Colorado, says the Independent Journal report their crops looking well and say they will have large yields. It has rained nearly every day for the past two weeks. This was indeed fortunate, as the water supply in the Rio Grande river was gone before the summer showers commenced. It is predicted by men in a position to make a fair estimate, that the greatest crop of grain ever raised in the San Luis valley will be harvested this fall. The season is fully two weeks earlier than usual.

James McGraw tells the Blister (Cal.) Gazette that last Thursday his wife and daughter were in the timber picking flowers, when the latter became separated. Six wolves attacked the little girl, and when she began to scream her dog came to her rescue. When the mother returned she found her daughter backed up against a tree and the dog having a hand-to-hand fight with the ugly snakes. Mrs. McGraw frightened them off and started for home. The wolves followed them, howling, barking and fighting. This happened near Hot lake, this county.

Talk about red tape. The recent strike was productive of some remarkable specimens, says the Bakersfield Californian. Mail matter from this place to Rosedale has to go via Jewetta, a distance of about 4 miles, before it can be sent to any other way. As the trains to the north were blocked, while there were one or two southbound, Postmaster Miller, acting under instructions, sent mail matter for Rosedale to Los Angeles, where it was transferred to San Pedro, took the steamer to San Francisco and finally was taken to Jewetta by train and thence to its destination, just eight miles from where it started.

The San Francisco Call has published a interview with a prominent railroad man, who gives some interesting figures of the loss entailed by the Southern Pacific company on account of the strike, lasting from June 27th. The only earnings are $150,000 and for fifteen days the loss of earnings is computed $2,250,000. Of the 19,000 employees of the company 15,000 were out of work, averaging $3 per day and aggregating $675,000. The loss to the public is too vast and complicated to be estimated. Wells, Fargo & Co.'s daily loss has been $10,000.

The Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, Miner has the following: The affair at Wardner in which Maurice Connolly was so unmercifully beaten, appears to have been much more brutal and high-handed than was at first reported. As he was being conveyed to the hospital he was dragged from the vehicle by Jack McGarrahan, a man named Whitehead, and, it is said, Pat Morris. While in a disabled condition he was brutally beaten over the head and face with a revolver and then taken down to the junction and ordered never to return there under pain of death, and as they left him one of them gave him a parting lay, as he called it, with a scantling. The perpetrators of the outrage cannot be found, though their names are known, and indictments have been found against them by the grand jury.

Green River (Wyo.) Star: As stated last week, we below give a brief outline of the mineral prospects of Piney, White Horse and adjacent country. Up the fork of Cottonwood, Piney, White Horse and other streams in that section the gold is about as plentiful as in Green River bars, all of them showing and from indications ought to be easily worked. The gold is similar in quality and fineness to that found in Green river. On the head of Cottonwood good looking quartz leads are seen. Some rich floor are reported both to quartz and placer near this section, but how rich is not known. A great limestone in prospecting comes from a few miles south of Leidecker in that section. They drive off horses and otherwise make the life of a prospector miserable. However, many men have been in there, and the section promises to be a good one for mineral development. This season will see much work put on leads and something good may be looked for.

A Curious Fatality.

A curious fatality seems to have attached itself to the family of Captain Wilson, the African fighter. All the members of it that have died have been the victim of accident or violence, except his mother, who succumbed to an attack of pneumonia. The kinsfolk of Captain Wilson's wife have fared no better. Two brothers in South Africa, Trevor Kemble Low the eldest son, Dr. George Wilson, a pioneer of sanitary science and a lover of fox hunting.—New York Ledger.
