fashions is the three-piece linen suit. The skirt and coat have less elaboration than the blouse, which is generally composed of all-over embroidery or Irish crochet lace. White linen is every whit as fashionable as it ever was, despite the efforts of the fashion-makers to replace it with pongee and silk and linen mixtures. Linen is especially in vogue for little coats that accompany frocks of lawn, mull and the like. Handkerchief linen is being used to a noticeable extent, and there is no doubt but that this particular weight is having an unprecedented run. Not only is the handkerchief linen blouse embroidered this season, but the skirt as well. Fine needlework wrought on its surface combines with lace medallions and insertions. Irish crochet, Valenciennes, Cluny and Venetian laces are equally popular for the embellishment of linen frocks, blouses and coats. Hosts of such patterns come in half-made patterns, a great saving of the dressmaker's time as well as the owner's purse.

The poet who sang of "The Tailor-Made Girl" so few years ago, had never in his mind such tailor-mades as now flaunt their unaccustomed frills and furbelows. Shaped bouffes and tulle shaper have elaborate fringing of shingling effects, overlapping trimmings far from plain, sometimes held in place with buttons. The cloth gown of today has its trimmings brought in-

FOULARD IN AFTERNOON FROCK.

A novel use of yellow satin ribbon is displayed upon this dressy little afternoon frock made of very light weight, satin-finished green foulard silk. The collar and chemise of lace are unlined, but the white lace bands that trim the skirt and form the round yoke and vest of the gown are placed upon yellow ribbon bands on which wider than the lace. Baby velvet ribbon, matching the green of the gown, edges the lace and forms clumsy bows with long drawn-out loops that connect the band trimming upon skirt and bodice.

In Woman's World.

To take blood tonics is nonsense. Mrs. Nature provides medicines of this sort. Strawberries contain a great deal of iron, and are splendid for the blood. There is nothing in the world finer than the crisp young white leaves of the dandelion, served with French dressing. Watercress is a wonderful cure for any kind of skin trouble, rash or redness. Eat it continually, three times a day, throwing over it a bit of salt and pepper and a few drops of lemon juice and olive oil. Mustard, young onions, lettuce are all waiting for us to make use of them, and they are wonderfully fine for restoring whiteness and clearness to the complexion. In spring cabbage there are many valuable phosphates for the enrichment and purification of the blood. Onions are a nerve tonic of well-known merit. Radishes and asparagus are both valuable medicines.

Chiffon poplin is a new material that reminds one of the lovely old gowns of our grandmothers, which are now treasured in the chests in the attic. Similar in weave and luster to the poplin of years ago, chiffon poplin has a soft drape that lends itself to present-day styles. With the thin, supple material chiffon poplin has a large following. Very taking was a walking frock made of a golden brown plaid chiffon voile over a taffeta foundation of the same tone. Straps of silk trimmed the skirt and served as stays to keep the plaid in place. A slim, real little Eton jacket that fitted snugly to about two inches above the waist was finished with a ripple of silk and the silk extending an inch below the veiling. The front was formed with a full surplice effect that gathered into a buckle and fastened at the left shoulder. The sleeves reached below the elbows and were finished with double ruffles to correspond with the jacket finish.
