The evidence before the coroner shewed that he committed suicide. Young Gatewood was the son of Rev. Robert Gatewood, of this city, and was 25 years of age. He was a graduate from Annapolis with high honors as a cadet engineer. He made one cruise and resigned and studied and taught physics and electricity at John Hopkin's university. At the time of his death he was a fourth assistant examiner in the division of steam engineering of the Patent Office, Washington. His mind, which was uncommently brilliant, had become unbalanced by the intense study and the writings he left showed that he imagined himself pursued by demons and chose death as the only escape from them.

CORRESPONDENCE. A REPLY TO "LOCAL ECONO-BERNT."

Editor Deseret News! I do not wish to enter into a controversy as to the soundness in general of the doctrines described in your paper regarding political economy, home manufacturing, etc., but there is one point in yesterday's News, in an article by "Local Economist," regarding wool and hides, which, for sake of the truth, it would be positively wrong to leave uncorrected. There is only one wool-jactory in success. only one wool-factory in success ful operation in Utah to-day, although experiments have been made in many localities in the same direction. They invariably resulted in failure, not from lack of raw material, but because the advocates is of a rather limited charac ter, and the only factory which now does a profitable business has been made to pay a fair rate of interest on its investment, not the castomers exclusively, but by snipping its products to the eastern states and adjoining territories.

To supply this factory with wool, and even an additional factory with the same manufacturing capacity, i may require at the highest estimate ter per cent of Utah's entire wool clip Will "Local Economist" state what h to be done with the remaining ninety per cent? Facts and figures are the only true guides in connection with political economy, and they will also lead us. where the much abused wool dealer, who seems to be the target of some newspaper solons, can say something to define his condition, and state facts.

Let us apply, then, the "fact and figure" test to the Utah wool-shipping business, by which "Local Economist" claims the "poor wool-growers" are being fiseced. Now the facts in the case are, that in 1886 the average price paid by Utah dealers at the different shipping points was about 18c per pound; the average price realized in the seaboard markets to date is about 2ic per pound. If you consider that it took 4 to 4 c per pound to ship wool and have a sold do you still think that the wool dealer is getting rich? Who is being fleeced now? As to hides, I will saymenat tanning has been attempted in every section of Utab, but has in only one instance a sulted in more than experimenting Even this tangery can work green stock into leather only, and a very small portion only of the entire supply at that. Dry bides, to find an outlet, must be exported, as well as the largest portion of our green hides. I you wish to stop exporting, one of two things has to happen: A decrease in the production of raw material, or an increase in the home con sumption and purchasing power to the level of production. It will require more than tenfold our present population and many more sources of revenue than we have at present, to bring about this end so much desired by COSMOPOLITAN.
