NOTABLE UTAH WOMEN.

MRS. GEORGE H. WOOD.

Mrs. George H. Wood, the subject of this sketch, has become widely and popularly known in Salt Lake, her exceptional qualities of mind and character having made her esteemed in private life, and her active participation in the practical work of local politics making her prominent in that important domain.

She is a staunch Democrat, having inherited her political bias from Southern ancestors, born, bred and raised in that special atmosphere, and has taken an active and ardent part in Utah politics for several years past. Though urged by her party to accept various honors in reward for her efficient service, she has invariably declined, her inclination having a distinctly domestic and private, rather than a public bent. She is a member of the Woman's Democratic Club of Utah, and in that capacity has also done efficient work in the interests of her party.

Mrs. Wood was born in Mississippi, and her earliest memories are associated with the large cotton plantation which was her childhood home, and the familiar Southern scenes which made her surroundings. She was educated at Whitworth College in Brookhaven, Miss., where her early girlhood was passed.

In 1885 she came to Utah with her mother to visit the late Hon. Frank H. Dyer, who was her half-brother, and became so favorably impressed with the place and people that she decided to make her home here, returning to reside permanently in 1887.

She spent two years in the employ of the Utah Agricultural College, and at the end of that time became the wife of Mr. George H. Wood, the present auditor of Salt Lake county.

While not a clamor for "woman's rights" she yet cherishes strong conviction that it is the duty of Utah women not only to study the science of government, but to make conscientious use of the privileges with which they have been endowed, and thus lend their aid to the right government of the commonwealth to which they belong.

who took part were Evelyn Whytock, Ella and Lulu Harr, Bennie Pratt, Josephine Beniamin, Ethel Harker, Louise and Fannie Laispiger, Ruby Hadley, Dashiell and Elida Havenor, and Hazel Bourgard.

A delightful social affair of the week was the opening "At Home" of the Reviewer's club on Monday afternoon, the members and a number of visitors meeting at the home of Mrs. A. C. Ewing. The rooms were prettily decorated with sweet peas, and a delightful program was enjoyed, the features including an address by Mrs. Nelden, who welcomed the members and gave an outline of the work for the coming year; interesting accounts of impressions of the great biennial in Milwaukee by Mrs. A. C. Ewing and Mrs. Truheart Lee, and an exceptionally able paper on the "Life and Work of Helen Hunt Jackson," by Mrs. Charles Richards. The program was followed by a pleasant social hour, dainty refreshments being served and the time enjoyably spent.

Mrs. Theodore Bruback gave a delightful party last night for Miss Jessie and Master Theodore Bruback, fifty-three children being present to enjoy the pretty entertainment. A delicious supper was served, the table being handsomely decorated with American Beauty roses, carnations and pink satin ribbons. The souvenirs were most unique, consisting of tiny English hat-boxes filled with candy. There were besides bisque rosebuds at each little lady's plate. The guests were:

Mrs. Marshall, Carrie Marshall, Russell Woodruff, Adelaide Woodruff, Margaret Walker, Sibyl Walker, Dorothy Leonard, Ruth Kerr, Yale Fox, Mary Sherman, Bessie Niles, Winnifred London, Zuleite Niles, Genevieve McCorkin, Geraldine Brown, William Ferguson, Marjorie Jacobs, Boyd Park, Eleanor Park, Dorothy Jacobs, Kate
