MAORI'S BIG DAY AT WANDAMERE

Resort Crowded With Natives From the Antipodes Yesterday.

INTERESTING EXHIBITION.

One of the Features Was a Meal Served a La Aborigine—Girls in Aquatic High Jinks.

Maori Day at Wandamere drew an interested crowd yesterday. In addition to the natives from the antipodes and islands of the Pacific there were present a number of elders who had filled missions on the islands and a number of friends and strangers who were interested in the exhibition of native customs and the aquatic high jinks on the part of two girls who had all kinds of fun in the water of the lake.

A meal served a la aborigine was one of the features. Undoubtedly all the range and stock men in town would have jumped at the chance of being permitted to loan their special makes for the occasion. But an oven was the least of the troubles of the chefs from the South Seas. Why use a steel range when the other way is so much better?

The other way consisted of digging a hole in the ground about two feet square and deep and building a fire therein. Across the top of the hole were placed a number of sticks and on these again were placed smooth stones. As soon as the stones were heated the embers were raked away and water was splashed over the stones until a cloud of steam arose. The rocks were then covered with a number of dampener corn shucks. The food was then placed on the shucks and the whole covered with wet gunny sacks. When the viands were cooked they were excellent.

The work of preparing the ham, potatoes and other edibles was under the supervision of Mary Whangana, the widow of the Maori chief. Those who partook of the cooked meats pronounced them to be excellent.

POLYNESIAN PROGRAM. While the dark eyed maidens were busy at work on this novel meal a Polynesian program was under way in the pavilion. By way of an overture Elder George Bolles, recently returned from a mission to New Zealand, gave a good imitation of a Maori chief welcoming his friends. With his body covered by a Kahu, a gaily colored Navajo blanket effect; with a lei, or flower rope, around his neck and with a stone war club in his hand he pranced around the pavilion in a most blood-thirsty manner. Connoisseurs on this style of the light fantastic asserted that it was as fast and bore all the hall marks of the real thing. The more graces he made and the harder he pranced, they asserted, the better he pleased many of his friends. Gathering in the jungles of Wandamere that he made good was demonstrated by the enthusiastic applause of the natives present.

Then followed the poi dance by Kate Smith and Mary Hall, two like American citizens of Maori extraction. Walter Smith, also a native, accompanied the maidens on the guitar.

Thomas Woodbury and Frank Cutler, who had spent some time in the Society Islands, and apparently indulged in some characteristic dialogue which evidently were comic recitations.

Miss Emma Purcell, a Samoan girl of prepossessing charm, sang a solo. She was followed by Mary Whangana, the widow of Huihi Whangana, the Maori chief who died some months ago, who delivered in the Maori tongue "The Lamentation For the Departed."

Another novel feature was the diving and swimming turn of Kate Smith and Mary Hall, a couple of native girls from New Zealand. After some delay in securing bathing costumes they went out in a boat and tested the waters of the lake under the big bridge. Having located a likely spot they rowed to shore and mounted the railing of the bridge. With a merry laugh which displayed gleaming rows of pearls and teeth they launched out into space and all kinds of fun. They swam around, dived to the bottom and brought up pebbles from the bed of the lake, played tag and generally enacted the roles of the seaside cut-ups.

MANY JOYOUS EVENTS. Throughout the afternoon and evening there were a number of joyous events, not forgetting picnic, dancing and a general jovial reunion on the part of all present. Polynesian greetings were the order of the day.

Benjamin K. Martineau, president of the Zion Maori association, was chairman of the general committee on arrangements, and he was assisted by R. K. Hardy, J. N. Lambert, T. L. Woodbury, Frank Cutler and L. E. Willey.

Superior to Lemonade. HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE. A teaspoonful added to a glass of cold water, with sugar, makes a delicious summer tonic.

CURTIS JAILED AGAIN. Morphine Fiend Commits Burglary to Secure Drugs.

Detectives Chase and Burt late last night arrested Raymond Curtis, and he was booked on a charge of burglary. The man is accused of having entered the livery stable of Ross & Brischner, where he was appropriating part of a harness and a whip when detected.

Curtis is a "dope" fiend of the worst character, and it was to obtain some of the drug that the theft was committed. Before being locked up Curtis begged pitifully for just one more "shot," but the request was not granted.

The outing season is nearly gone. But MOUNT'S Pork and Beans is right for any season, served hot or cold.

BEEF GALL CURE. Reader of the "News" Gives Simple Formula Which He Says is Effective.

The "News" is in receipt of a communication, giving a remedy for preventing lock jaw, blood poison and kindred diseases that so frequently follow slight injuries received from a scratch, a silver, running a nail in the foot, and in other ways. The treatment suggested is certainly simple and it may be all that the writer claims for it. Following is the letter: Editor Desert News:

Maui, Aug. 23.—I read in the Semi-weekly News of Monday last an account of the death of a boy from lock-jaw, caused by a small silver that had entered his foot. I am prompted to suggest that beef gall will prevent suffering and death in such cases.

A clean, white piece of cloth, either cotton or linen, folded until it is quite thick, should be well soaked with gall and applied to the injured part. The cloth should not be permitted to get dry. If a silver, needle or other foreign substance is in the wound, it will be drawn to the surface and may be removed without cutting. The gall will keep the wound free from poison, inflammation and other bad effects. The treatment is equally effective in injuries caused by nails.

In all cases it is necessary to take medicine to cleanse the blood and carry the poison from the system. Beef gall can be kept fresh and good for several years, if kept in a tightly corked bottle. Mixing the gall with whisky or alcohol keeps it thin and helps to preserve it. Respectfully, A. O. HANSEN.

"MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES." There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day and he prepares for the showers which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhoea and cholera are the most common ailments of the summer months. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, and delay may prove fatal. For sale by all druggists.

"THE LORD IS MINDFUL." Popular Song Written By Kansas Woman Well Known to Many Utahns.

The "News" has received from Sabetia, Kan., a song, entitled, "The Lord is Mindful." The words and music are the product of Mrs. L. M. Frank of the place named, a lady known to many of those who have labored as missionaries in those parts. The solo has much merit as will be seen from a perusal of the words, which are here reproduced. The music is sweet and exceedingly well harmonized.

Ye heralds, scattered far and wide, Upon the land or ocean's tide, Obey the voice of God's command, Go bear the truth to every land. The harvest's white on hills and plain, Go gather in the golden grain. The Master calls, you may not stay Your hand until the close of day.

Fear not, for God is over all, And He who marks the sparrow's fall, Will guard the seed where'er 'tis sown. The Lord is mindful of His own. The Satan and his hosts assail, God's promise will not prove vain. He will go with you to the end, To guide, to bless and to defend.

His truth must spread from sea to sea, Till stars shall fade and suns grow cold. And God the judgment books unfold, Then with life's toil and labor done, The battle fought, the victory won, Triumph at His feet we'll fall And crown our Jesus Lord of all.

Chorus. Oh, wondrous thought! O matchless grace! There we shall see Him face to face; And with our loved ones gone before, We'll reign with Christ for evermore.
