

MURDERED IN CHINA.

Particulars of the Assassination of
Rev. James Wylie.

AN ISOFFENSIVE MISSIONARY.

The Victim Attacked by Soldiers and Crusally Beaten to Death in the Street.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—A New China, correspondent gives a full account of the cruel murder of Rev. James Wylie, a Scotch missionary in north China, the more sensational of which was received by cable. The victim, Li Hong Chang, was withered (this crime, as he was it would seem) through sympathy with China, was so stated that the culprit to be killed and that prompt money to be paid to the relatives of the victim. The correspondent, writing under the name of August 20th, says:

On August 20th at Loeh Yang, a town on the river, I saw above me, on the way to the river, a man, a Scotchman, a member of the Scotch Presbyterian mission, with his wife and two children, and a Chinese servant, were walking along the river bank. The man was a Scotchman, a member of the Scotch Presbyterian mission, with his wife and two children, and a Chinese servant, were walking along the river bank. The British residents here have taken the necessary steps to draw the attention of the Chinese authorities to the position of foreigners at the present time and to the certainty of serious consequences in the winter. Among the grounds for complaint is the fact that the Chinese authorities are not doing their duty in the matter.
