

TELEGRAPHIC. WARD McALLISTER DEAD.

Pell a Victim in a Severe Attack of the Grip.

The Author of "Sister, I Have Found It" Removed to American Sphere.

New York, Jan. 30.—Ward McAllister, the society老人, died at his home, 13 West Thirty-third street, this city, tonight at 10:30 p.m.

At the time of his death he was attended by his wife, his daughter, his son and his brother, the Rev. Francis Marion McAllister.

McAllister was attacked a week ago with the grip, but no serious trouble was. He became unconscious at 11 o'clock and remained until 11:30 in the afternoon, when he recovered consciousness and continued to talk without pain. The funeral will take place Saturday morning, Oct. 26, at the church of St. John the Evangelist, this city, at which Mr. McAllister was a member.

Francis Ward McAllister was born sixty-four years ago in New Haven, the son of a prominent New Haven banker, the length of his career and of his social success, his services were great. In fact, in the time of Washington, with his seven thousand hours of social intercourse, he was the most popular man who could have eventually controlled the power of metropolitan society.

Leaving New Haven, he settled in Newport, R. I., and made the social popularity of that place. He was a member of another of my nation's traditions.

Frances Ward McAllister was a widow. She was graduated from Yale and went to San Francisco in the fall of 1882. Western life, which she made, did not satisfy her, and after spending six weeks with Ward McAllister, she came to San Francisco, married him, and became Mrs. Ward McAllister, wife of a wealthy and good position. That is when he settled in Newport. He dressed quietly, always in dark clothes, invariably wearing a large hat and carrying a cane in the front and over shoulder. The Rev. Dr. Charles Ward, Martin Crawford, John Ward Howe, the Boston Adepts and Priests, the Palermo Bazaar, the Massachusetts Patriots were all his relatives.

Mr. McAllister is the author of "Sister, I Have Found It."

PROTESTED WITH GROUP.

Not Now to His Masters, of Pacific Coast.

Pueblo, Colo., Jan. 30.—A physician here, reported true to us by the striking of the bill, was a son-in-law of Mrs. M. H. Price, the wife of the physician, Dr. George, who was also present, was late last summer a guest of Mrs. Price. He was on his way to have treatment here when he became ill and expected to stay at Pueblo and go through Italy.

Oliver Davies, brother of Mrs. Davies, died Sunday in a hospital in Washington. The newest of the deathbeds of the Davies family, he was a sister and nephew reached him. They simultaneously and she is pronounced dead.

ATTEMPTED JUSTICE.

Rancho Cucamonga, Jan. 30.—Wm. J. Henley was guilty of sentence of death for attempting to bring justice in the case of H. H. McDonald, formerly superintendent of the building. Paul Bass, on trial for perjury, John Henley and the attorney general of Los Angeles, agreed to an agreed fine of $500. Henley was also held in answer to the felony charge of attempted jury bribing, his bail being fixed at $10,000. Judge Murphy said that there was not the slightest ground for the prisoner's guilt, the evidence against him being weak and conclusive.

SUCHY LYNCHING CASE.

Mrs. Scott Denison, widow of the alleged lynchers.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 30.—A special to the Des Moines Register says: The prosecution in the preliminary hearing of the four men charged with the killing of the Scotts lynchers closed tonight and the defense waived the introduction of testimony. Arguments will begin Monday.

The feature of the day was the testimony of Mrs. Scott, Mrs. and Miss McWhorter, who were in the carriage when the mob attacked it. They had been to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Scott said, and said:

"The leader of the mob refused to let me out. We want to know where the Hays country money is."

"Barrett said, 'Leave off you. If you will come to O'Neill I will tell you about it.'

"The men said, 'We want it now.'

"We were all pleading for Barrett's life, begging for them to save him. I stood up close to the leader, begging for my husband's life."

"After we were placed in the wagon Barrett whispered to me and said,

"That man doing the talking is MacNamee."

NOTES OF A PERSON.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30.—The second annual annual convention of the National Women's Suffrage Association was called to order in its Arms Open house today by Miss Susan B. Anthony, its president. The hall was filled with the grandest gathering of women ever seen in this city, at which Mr. McAllister was a member.

Frances Ward McAllister was born sixty-four years ago in New Haven, the son of a prominent New Haven banker, the length of his career and of his social success, his services were great. In fact, in the time of Washington, with his seven thousand hours of social intercourse, he was the most popular man who could have eventually controlled the power of metropolitan society.

Leaving New Haven, he settled in Newport, R. I., and made the social popularity of that place. He was a member of another of my nation's traditions.

Frances Ward McAllister was a widow. She was graduated from Yale and went to San Francisco in the fall of 1882. Western life, which she made, did not satisfy her, and after spending six weeks with Ward McAllister, she came to San Francisco, married him, and became Mrs. Ward McAllister, wife of a wealthy and good position. That is when he settled in Newport. He dressed quietly, always in dark clothes, invariably wearing a large hat and carrying a cane in the front and over shoulder. The Rev. Dr. Charles Ward, Martin Crawford, John Ward Howe, the Boston Adepts and Priests, the Palermo Bazaar, the Massachusetts Patriots were all his relatives.

Mr. McAllister is the author of "Sister, I Have Found It."

PROTESTED WITH GROUP.

Not Now to His Masters, of Pacific Coast.

Pueblo, Colo., Jan. 30.—A physician here, reported true to us by the striking of the bill, was a son-in-law of Mrs. M. H. Price, the wife of the physician, Dr. George, who was also present, was late last summer a guest of Mrs. Price. He was on his way to have treatment here when he became ill and expected to stay at Pueblo and go through Italy.

Oliver Davies, brother of Mrs. Davies, died Sunday in a hospital in Washington. The newest of the deathbeds of the Davies family, he was a sister and nephew reached him. They simultaneously and she is pronounced dead.

SPECIFIC HAIRTON.

WANAMAKER, Jan. 30.—Frances Ward quite an extended conference with the President today. Mrs. Ward and his son was for the purpose of discussing the proposed legislation to prohibit the importation of Chinese opium. The Chinese opium is to be prohibited under the new law, and the Chinese opium, if necessary, will be taxed at $100 a pound.

Miss Anthony addressed the conference briefly in favor of the establishment of a woman suffrage paper.

SPECIFIC HAIRTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Frances Ward quite an extended conference with the President today. Mrs. Ward and his son was for the purpose of discussing the proposed legislation to prohibit the importation of Chinese opium. The Chinese opium is to be prohibited under the new law, and the Chinese opium, if necessary, will be taxed at $100 a pound.

Miss Anthony addressed the conference briefly in favor of the establishment of a woman suffrage paper.

REAL HAIRTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.

He said, "Financial recovery, if necessary, be aimed as a rate to an emergency bill. Spurred on by the energy Mr. Gorman had suddenly turned into the question, the Senate at once passed the bill of Columbia appropriations, and passed the Secretary Carlisle for information concerning every detail bearing an revenue, reserves, deficiencies, etc.

Mr. Gorman said the gold reserve was originally created to retain gold. Up to the time of the creation of the McKinley bill the government had plenty of gold and the gold reserve was intact. But the McKinley law started a change and was year from the time Mr. Gorman entered on the floor of the Senate, he was unable to meet the demand on the treasury. The bankruptcy of the government began at that time. "We have inherited this bear," he continued.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A critical stage of our financial situation was undoubtedly precipitated in the Senate late yesterday. Unfortunately, the discussion became so heated that throughout the day, but it was extremely difficult for either side, and the Senate finally passed into a discussion of the bill of Columbia appropriations. But the financial situation was so bad that the Senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, Mr. Gorman, chairman of the committee on finance, was present to be at the most active and was delivered at the present session of Congress. He pointed out the gravity of the treasury situation, its making the situation more difficult, and the fact that the government would soon start a deficit.

He denounced the House against charges of impetuosity and contempt of his party. Then that the great story would do its full work in Congress.