The speaker condemned the practise of card-playing, saying that the Latter-day Saints should be so busily engaged in more serious things than they should for the same in more serious things than they should have no time for that frivolous game. The brethren in the wards were re-quested to speak against this practise and urge the young to refrain from it. Concerning clubs, the speaker declared that the best club for the women of the stake was the Relief society. If they can find any faults in that organiza-tion, they should work together to re-move the defects and increase the effi-ciency of the society. A vocal solo, "Calvary," was rendered by Miss Millie Williams. DEPENDENT F. M. LYMAN.

PRESIDENT F. M. LYMAN.

PRESIDENT F. M. Drank. Eider Francis M. Lyman addressed the assembly. He said that out of a population of nearly 10,000 souls in this stake there ough to be enough at the morning session of the conference to crowd the building. He suggested that those who were present invite their neighbors to attend the next confer-erce, where they may partake of the sacrament and feel that they were do-sacrament and feel that they were do-ing their duty in the sight of God. The Bishops should teach the neglectful members of their wards to be observ-ant of their secret and family prayers. It is essential in the life of a Latter-day Saint to derive spiritual strength by supplicating the Father in heaven. In the morning, before some to the by supplicating the Father in heaven. In the morning, before going to the tasks of the day, at noon, or whenever there is a cessation in the hum of business, and in the evening before re-tiring for the night, a heartfelt prayer should ascend to God. It is an excellent thing to pass one's self under scrutiny, from time to time, to see whether any progress had been made, and it is desirable to fortify one's self morally, physically, and fin-ancially, in order to bear the burdens of life. To obtain salvation it is nec-cessary that one should observe always of life. To obtain savation it is nec-cessary that one should observe always the commandments of the Lord. It does not do for a man to live a right-cous life for a few years and then com-mit murder or steal or tell falseboods.

Susa Young Gates admonished the young women not to worry so much about their meetings and about prepar-ing their lessons. They ought not to wear themselves out by too much study. The promise of Christ should be considered, that He will help bear the burdens and cares of life. In all efforts to advance intellectually, one should not forget the old-fashioned, simple truths of the gospel. The Church stood for the up-building of the home. The home should become more and more important.

PRESIDENT A. H. LUND.

Elder Anthon H. Lund was the heat speaker. He remarked that in the vineyard of the Lord there should be no idleness. All should be workers, striving conselessly for the salvation of mankind. Work and constant endeav-or give happiness that can not be ob-tained from any other source. Whattained from any other source. What-ever may be your position in the Church do not look down upon it, but do your best, even in seeming obscurity.

Promises are sacred things. When Promises are sacred things. When they are made they should be scrupul-ously observed. When partaking of the sacrament, promises should be made to God which ought never to be broken. Mormonism, despised as it is, stands for all that is good, for honesty, for cleanliness in life, for the purity of the home. Everything that is pleasing in the eyes of God is supported by this system of religion, which is nothing but the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. PEEMDENTS UNIVERSE SDEALCS

PRESIDENT WINDER SPEAKS.

Elder John R. Winder expressed his pleasure at the excellent conditions in the stake. He was glad that commit-tees had been formed to take charge of sunascients and excursions during the coming summer. It was unfortunate that at social gatherings acqualit-ances were formed which frequently resulted in the marriage of a member of the Church with an unbeliever. Such imfaallances were not productive of good to the parties concerned. Differ-ences of religious belief and practise

ELDER O. F. WHITNEY. "Some one has said," remarked El-der Whitney in opening his address. "let me write the ballads of a people and I care not who shall make their laws." The speaker was reminded of this saying by the quotation from Burns by the previous speaker and from the hymn "O My Father," just rendered by the choir. He would rather have the honor of writing that which would live when the author was dead and forgotten than to occupy any high place to which men usually aspire.

When Gen. Wolfe was in the boat under way to the scene of his last battle, continued Elder Whitney, he read to those about him Grey's Elegy, and remarked, "I would rather be the puther of that poem than to take the and remarked. "I would rather be the author of that poem than to take the city of Quebec." Well might he make such a statement for when the deeds of the gailant Wolfe at the Heights of Abraham are forgotten, the words of the poet will still live. Far better would it be to sing for the comfort of a soul in distress than to shine while sitting upon a throne.

WHO IS GREATEST.

The speaker had recently discussed the question as to what constituted greatness, and the opinion was reach-ed that the conclusion was largely a matter of the point from which the subject was viewed. An official of the Territory of Utah had once remarked that had Brigham Young been a learn, ed man and remained in the east he might have become great and died a millionaire. Elder Whitney contend-ed that the achievements of Brigham Young as a colonizer, architect and leader of men stamped him as a genius far in advance of the ideal depicted by the United States marshal. If the question had been asked 2,000 years ago as to who was the greatest then living, the answer would doubtless have been that Augustus was the man. Yet at that very time there walked among men the God of heaven and carth, whose glory will shine in spien-dor when the sun has dimmed with age. Who in Christendom would com-pare a Caesar with Jesus the Son of the living God? The speaker had recently discussed double the number. Elder Francis M. Lyman announced that it had been ascertained that there were L155 persons in attendance. While the building seemed fairly well filled, there ought to be at least 1,500 pres-ent. He asked that the oilfcers of the stake use their efforts to have that number present at the next conference. The speaker advised the young people to think more of their homes, to re-main with their parents at night in-stead of wandering about from place to place. While public libraries were excellent things, it was far better to have a small private library at home, where a boy or girl might read and where a boy or girl might read and study and build up the home influence. Speaking of the scope of the gospel. Elder Lyman said that the work of the Church contemplated the salvation of all who would permit themselves to be saved. Singing, "High on the mountain top." Benediction by Eva Forsberg.
