LITTLE JIMMIE.

In his little chamber cosy,
With his cheeks so round and rosy,
Thinking not of care or weeping,
Little Jimmie's soundly sleeping,
Listening only to the singing
Of the birds his dreams are bringing.

He's a cunning little fellow,
With his hair of glistening yellow,
And a mouth as sweet and rosy
As the rose, his favorite posy;
But no garden flower, the tiniest,
Dares compare with him, our smallest.

When comes floating, merry laughter,
You may know he follows after.
If you hear a clear voice ringing,
You may know that he is singing;
But be sure if you hear a sighing
That he's not the child "a-crying."

He's a sunbeam all the daytime,
He's the life of every playtime.
When the stars their watch are keeping,
He's a cherub sweetly sleeping.
He makes all things bright about him—
Oh, we couldn't do without him!

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

The Louisiana Affair.

WASHINGTON, 15. — Frelinghuysen next addressed the senate, and defended the Federal [illegible] from the charges made against them, which he said were ungenerous, unjust and untrue. He was opposed to any interference by the military with the civil power in time of peace, but he said the fact about this case was, that the civil power was not interfered with, and only a usurpation was driven out.

Salisbury deprecated the attempt of republican senators to make a partisan question of a crime which should receive the condemnation of all parties alike. After an executive session a recess was taken till 7:30 in the evening, for the continuance of the debate on the Louisiana matter.

In the evening only fourteen senators were present and the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Bill Rejected.

The bill reported by Meyer, from the committee on foreign affairs, for the relief of the officers and crew of the U. S. ships Wyoming and Tekiang, was discussed at great length by a committee of the whole, and finally defeated in committee by a vote of 90 to 57; the committee then rose and reported its action to the house, which was concurred in by a vote of 99 to 57, and the bill was rejected.

The Louisiana Report—The Irwin Habeas Corpus Case.

G. F. Hoar, from the select committee on outrages in the Southern States, presented the report of the sub-committee which had been to New Orleans, and stated at the same time that the committee had voted to proceed forthwith to Louisiana to continue the investigation; the report was ordered printed but was not read.

Dawes informed the House that after adjournment to-day in the habeas corpus case of R. B. Irwin, Judge McArthur decided that the sergeant-at-arms must obey the writ and produce the prisoner.

Kasson submitted, from the ways and means committee, a resolution ordering the sergeant-at-arms to inform Judge McArthur that he holds Irwin by order of the House for contempt alone, and the House requires him to retain the prisoner until he shall purge himself of that contempt, and that, as an officer of the House he cannot disobey its orders.

After a long debate Dawes moved the previous question, which the House refused to second, and Beck offered a substitute, directing the sergeant-at-arms to make a careful return to the writ that the prisoner was duly held by authority of the House, to answer proceedings against him for contempt, and to take with him the body of Irwin before the Court while making such return as required by law. Beck said he saw nothing left for the House but to obey the law, and if it was bad, repeal it, but as it existed the House must obey it; the substitute was adopted, and the House adjourned till Monday.

EASTERN.

Horrible.

NEW YORK, 15.—The two negroes, Jackson and Jarvis, who murdered Samuel Jones, at Oyster Bay, L. I., last summer, were hanged at North Hempstead, to-day; Jackson died with a few struggles, but the rope by which Jarvis was suspended broke, and, when another was procured and a second attempt was made to hang him, the noose slipped out of the latch ring, and the poor wretch still stood; he was understood to say, piteously, "For God's sake, gentlemen, make sure work of it this time." He was then literally pulled by the hand and slowly strangled to death

The Beecher Trial.

During the examination of Moulton Judge Fullerton turned to Evarts and asked for a copy of the church records, to prove that the charge of W. F. West against Tilton, founded on the Woodhull scandal, had never been entered on the books; Evarts replied that he didn't think they were compelled to produce the church records and the court sustained him. The examination of Moulton was continued at some length, after which the court adjourned till Monday.

Pleading for Monopoly.

WASHINGTON, 15.—E.S. Sanford, of the Adams Express Co., argued before the House post office committee, to-day, against the practice of allowing packages of less than four pounds to pass through the mails at the rate of half a cent an ounce, claiming that it was an injustice to the express companies and a loss to the government.

Treaties Considered.

The cabinet was in session three hours this afternoon on the Hawaiian treaty and the Canada postal treaty.

Summary of Louisiana Report.

The report of the sub-committee, on the Louisiana matter, is made public, and the main points are essentially as already telegraphed. The committee review the action of the returning board, and declare it manifestly arbitrary, unjust and illegal, and that this alone prevented the return of a majority of conservatives to the lower house of the legislature. As to the intimidation of colored voters, while some witnesses testified in a general way to intimidation, no one testified to any personal knowledge of it, nor was any one produced who had been intimidated, or threatened or assaulted because of his political opinions, or discharged or refused employment. Nearly all the white witnesses were officeholders who supported the Kellogg government, or relations of office holders. On the other hand, the use of federal troops under the direction of U. S. marshals was clearly proved; they not only made many arrests immediately before the election, but reported that they were coming to particular neighborhoods about the time of the election, and this served, the conservatives claimed, to intimidate white voters. As an instance of the different light in which the two parties view things, the committee say the U. S. commissioner in the parish of Iberia arrested a number of white men just previous to the election, upon the application of negroes; he then required sureties for the arrested parties, who possessed real estate within the parish, certified to by the parish assessor to be of sufficient value, and with title approved by register deeds. This rule produced a delay in procuring bail, and a procession of citizens waited upon him and offered a bond signed by all of them. This he regarded in derision of his proceedings, and he was called as a witness to prove intimidation in that parish. He cited this as the only case of intimidation in his knowledge. He thought the procession calculated to intimidate negroes. On the other hand, the conservatives thought his proceedings calculated to intimidate the whites.

The committee found some difference of opinion in the reports of the U. S. military officers stationed in the country. Their evidence showed that in some cases negroes were maltreated for voting the conservative ticket, and one was shot for making a conservative speech, and even in New Orleans negroes who sought to co-operate with the conservatives were so abused that an association of lawyers volunteered to protect them, but with little effect.

The committee give an account of the general condition of affairs in the state, of the conviction among the whites that the Kellogg government was a usurpation, of the general lack of confidence in the State and local officials, the heavy decline of state securities and the exorbitant taxes, the reduction of wages, the non-fulfilment of personal or political pledges, malfeasance in local affairs, disputes among leading colored persons, loss or embezzlement in some cases of school funds, and the failure of the freedmen's bank, all of which combined to divide the views of the colored voters.

During the campaign the conservatives sought, and successfully, to secure a portion of the colored votes, the result was that in November, '74, the people of Louisiana did fairly have a free, peaceable registry and election, in which a clear conservative majority was elected to the lower house of the legislature, of which majority they were deprived by the unjust and illegal action of the returning board.

The committee say there are turbulent spirits in the State, and they quote an editorial from the Shreveport News, advising the killing of the radicals returned as elected, who were not elected, but they do not believe that this reflects the feeling of the people, though all admit that the white people of the whole state were greatly outraged by the action of the returning board, and all concede that the Kellogg government is only upheld by federal bayonets. Governor Kellog says this is because of the doubt that Congress has permitted about the legality of his government, but the conservatives say that his government is not only illegal, but corrupt and abusive.

In relation to the White League the committee give statements of members as to its origin and design, and add that a large number of republicans belong to it, and there was no evidence of its existence to any extent out of New Orleans. Republicans assert, however, that the League is an armed body of volunteers, organized for the purpose of intimidating the negroes, and overthrowing the Kellogg government. This assertion was not, however, supported by any evidence. On the other hand, there was an assertion by counsel that other black leagues existed. The committee do not doubt that the White League would readily cooperate in any feasible scheme for the overthrow of the Kellogg government, but so will substantially all the white citizens of Louisiana.

The committee give a detailed account of the affair of the 14th of September, and say that the conservatives of Louisiana don't propose to fight the federal government, but submit, not because they want to, but because they must. The trouble is simply that they believe themselves to have been defrauded out of the election of '72, and still more so, out of that of '74, and that they think their state government has been, to the last degree, destructive and corrupt. The committee declare the belief that the substantial citizens of the State will submit to any fair determination of the question of the late election, or anything by which they can have a firm and good government; what they seek is peace, and the opportunity for prosperity. To that end they will support any form of government that will afford them just protection. In their distress they have got beyond any mere question of political party.

The committee report, at length, the facts in relation to the attempted organization of the legislature on the 4th inst., and conclude by saying—"We have been unable to agree upon any recommendations, but upon the report we are all agreed."
