

GRUESOME REMINDERS OF SALT LAKE CRIME

Not a great many citizens are aware of the fact that the Salt Lake Police department can boast of owning one of the largest and finest collections of police records in the West.

Since the recent clean up of the old station, and the changes made by Chief Hilton in the desk sergeants' and officers' quarters, many old, half forgotten relics were uncovered and caused some of the "old members" of the force to lapse into a reminiscent mood, for all the relics were captured by Salt Lake policemen, and if their records were published, it would form an interesting volume.

On another shelf is a collection of knives; one of them, a most murderous looking weapon, has a tag on it which gives the information that with the knife a Chinaman assaulted a boy on Commercial street in 1890.

locks and work the combination of safe with the best of them. There are a number of safe drills used by professional "crackers" or safe blowers. One of them was taken from Jim Lansing and C. P. Adams in 1899.

Among the safe bags there is the one which was used by the gang who shot James Caine, son of Hon. John T. Caine, his death blow, in 1892, on East First South street. The act was a most shocking one and sent a thrill of horror through the whole community.

der the circumstances, it would have been easy enough for him to kill himself and avoid being shot. "Here is a copy of a letter Hopt wrote to his sister at 5 o'clock on the morning of the day he was executed."

MORE FUNSTON STORIES.

Episodes in the Strenuous Career of the Captor of Aguinaldo.

From his boyhood days Fred Funston has been a fighter. He was born in Ohio in 1856, but his father, E. H. Funston, soon moved to Kansas, where he became a congressman, and was known as Fognorn Funston, says the Chicago Tribune.

was a "scrapper" with a razor record. Funston was about five feet three inches and weighed about ninety-five. He "bluffed" the colored brother to a "standstill" and went for a warrant and marched the boss jail through the main streets of Lawrence at the point of a gun.

Well dressed, witty, if a man distinguished looking, if a woman beautiful, giving handsome entertainments and figuring at every society function, our friend, gradually gains a sure footing in the social life of the capital.

MARK TWAIN'S PRACTICAL SPEECH

While visiting in Elmira, New York, during a political campaign Mark Twain made a short speech, introducing to a large audience General Hawley, of Connecticut. In the course of his remarks Twain said:
