

penses in addition to his regular mileage. The sheriff of the county has been charging litigants for livery hire and hotel bills, in addition to his regular fees, and the matter was brought up on a motion to relax costs in a certain case.

Miss Sorabji, the daughter of a learned Parsee, and who created no little attention at the world's congress of religions, is announced to discuss the influence of missionaries on the religious life in India, in reply to the statements of fact by Mr. Nagarkar, in his lecture on "The Customs of India" at the First Baptist church, Denver. Mr. Nagarkar recently visited Salt Lake as a lecturer.

A crazy Finn was found on Monday afternoon by William Daley about three miles west of Rawlins, Wyo. He was without coat or hat, his face badly scratched and one eye swollen shut. He was brought to town and placed in jail. He formerly worked in No. 3 mine, Rock Springs, and started for Hopkinsville, a neighboring camp, and got lost. He seems to have no knowledge as to what became of his coat and hat or how he was injured.

Mr. George Arnett, who lives three and a half miles northeast of Greeley, Col., met with a serious accident going into town. While crossing the railroad track on Seventh street his wagon was struck by the pay car which was going in over the Gulf division. The tracks were filled with cars which hid the coming train from view. Mr. Arnett received two severe scalp wounds, severe bruises on the left shoulder and one rib was broken. His wagon was carried nearly a block by the engine.

The amount of hay, says the Phoenix, Ariz., Gazette, shipped over the Atlantic and Pacific road in 1893 and up to March 1st was 8,303 tons, most of which was intended for points along the line. Of this amount, 2,823 tons came by the way of Mohave, 2,154 from Southern California by way of Barstow, and 3,426 tons by way of Albuquerque. Over half of this vast amount will be taken from the Salt river valley upon the completion of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix railroad.

It is more than probable that another fatality of the last storm will soon be recorded, observes the Sundance (Wyo.) Gazette. George Dorset, a boy of 15 or 16, son of Charles Dorset, deceased, was employed in carrying the mail from Belle Fourche to Nashville and Camp Crook, near the Short Pine hills. He started out with the mail the first day of the storm, and no tidings have been received of him since leaving Belle Fourche. A search party has discovered the mail wagon in a snow drift, but found no signs of the driver.

Samuel Batt, aged 12 years, son of a farmer living in the eastern part of Holyoke county, Colo., was killed on Wednesday by the caving in of a sand bank. He and his brother, some two years older, had gone to an old sand bank, 200 or 300 yards from the residence, after sand, and while in the pit, which was five feet in depth, the bank caved upon the brothers, partially covering the elder and burying the younger one under three feet of earth. He was dead when uncovered, some fifteen or twenty minutes afterwards.

J. B. Thayer and E. R. Leonard have purchased a three-fourths interest in the patent of the Prout gold saving machine, William Prout, the inventor, retaining the remaining interest, says the Idaho Daily Statesman. Mr. Leonard had the machine bonded and worked it for a few days on Snake river. Satisfying himself that the machine would do all that was claimed for it operations were discontinued and the controlling interest in the patent purchased. As soon as Mr. Thayer returns to the city the manufacture of the machines will be commenced.

A sad case of insanity has been brought to the attention of the lunacy commissioners at San Francisco, and Edwin Hahn is consigned to the insane asylum at Ukiah. The young man has been attending the Hastings College of Law and was making very rapid progress. He was to have graduated this coming June. A short time ago his health began to fail him and his parents, who live in San Francisco, had him sent to Haywards to recuperate. The student gradually commenced to get worse, and at last his reason gave way. Overstudy is the cause of his insanity.

John Cuddy and Gerry Snow loaded four carloads of cattle at Welser last week for Troutdale, Or., says the Welser (Idaho) Signal. They were all dehorned, the first of that class, we believe, that has been shipped from here, and this and the extra fine condition in which they were in caused them to attract considerable interest. The process of dehorning presents so many economic advantages in feeding, increased loading capacity of cars and diminished injury to stock in transportation, that it is growing in favor among cattlemen and shippers, and will, in time, be generally adopted in this section.

George Greenwood, a San Francisco counterfeiter, who arrived at Portland, Or., a few weeks ago, and has since flooded that town with spurious half and quarter dollars, has been arrested with his partner, Frank Sieckhardt, an ex-convict, while in the act of manufacturing worthless coin. A complete set of dies and counterfeiting tools was captured by the officers. On being closely questioned Greenwood admitted that he was in the possession of a secret composition and wash used by the most expert counterfeiters in the country; also that he worked San Francisco until the town grew too hot for him, when he decamped. The spurious coins are said to be of remarkably fine workmanship.

An old rag picker, nicknamed "Tin Can" Adams walked into the Platte river at Thirty-eighth street, Denver, on Monday, and was drowned. Whether it was a case of suicide or an accident will never be known. The body was found washed up into shallow water a few yards from where it was supposed to have fallen into the stream. Nothing was found on the old man's clothing except a pipe and some smoking tobacco. Adams was about fifty years of age and lived alone in a little cabin near the Burlington railroad. Little is known of him save that he has been in Denver several years and that he had made few friends and frequently went on sprees of drinking. Following these sprees came seasons of melancholy, and it is presumed that he was getting over one of these periodical drunks and deliberately walked into the river with suicidal intent.

Word has just been received at Denver of the finding of the remains of an unknown man near Crook's mountain, on the stage line between Lander and Rawlins, and about five miles south of Roncis postoffice. The discovery was made by Eli Signor, postmaster at the above mentioned place, and from indications the man had been dead two or three years. There were found with the body a shotgun, which was loaded, and a five-shooter, two chambers of which were empty, and in one of the pockets of the clothing a $10 gold piece and $4 in silver. No clue has been discovered as to his identity, and no one is known to be missing from that section. The coroner has left for the scene of the discovery to make an investigation.

James Hassmer was shot at Boulder, Col., at 10 o'clock on Tuesday night by Mrs. Cyrus Deardorff and died two hours afterwards. Hassmer, with five other men, were out taking in the town. Calling at Mrs. Deardorff's house, which has rather a shady reputation, they were refused admittance. After parleying a while, Hassmer attempted to force an entrance, and was met at the door by Mrs. Deardorff, who fired one shot. Hassmer fell and was carried away by his associates. On examination it was found that the bullet had pierced the brain, near the right eye, and could not be extracted. Mrs. Deardorff was arrested at once. She states that she has frequently been annoyed by Hassmer. Hassmer leaves a wife. The coroner's jury returned a verdict declaring that Mrs. Deardorff did not shoot with felonious intent.

On Tuesday, George Raymond, who is serving a sixty-day sentence and a $100 fine in the county jail, at Denver, and who is also held under a failure to put up a $500 bond for assault to murder, is a criminal with a record. Word has been received from Chicago that the photograph of the prisoner sent there is that of John Brophy, an ex-convict who has served time in several state prisons. March 1, 1891, he got a year in Joliet for burglary. Previous to that he had served three years in the Kansas penitentiary and a year in San Quentin, Cal. He will be given a trial at the criminal court on the charge of assaulting Morris Isaacs, a clerk in Roseenthal's Denver clothing store, about a month ago. He slashed Isaac's across the face with a knife while trying to escape with several pairs of trousers which he had secreted under his coat.

The Manti Sentinel says a new canal is being built from above Redmond to Dover. It covers over a thousand acres previously left without water.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wood, says the Springville Independent, met with quite a serious accident last Monday evening. George was already asleep, Mrs. Wood was sitting up in bed, when, somehow the heavy upright portion fell, crushing her down and completely closing them in. The lady was severely hurt, besides receiving an injurious nervous shock. The husband was nearly smothered when liberated by the mother, who came to the rescue from the adjoining room.
