THE LAST RESORT.
I'm a man devoid of capital,
Without a regular trade,
And many things I've tried by which
A living may be made.
I was educated for the law,
But found it much too slow,
And having neither friends nor cash,
I didn't get much show.
When tired of business barter
Of respectable starvation,
I determined as a book-keeper
To seek a situation.
And for six dollars weekly pay
I staved from more till night;
I threw up in much disgust
And left with pockets light.
I then got on a newspaper
To win my way to fame,
I wrote some strong sensations up
But soon came in for blame;
For people said I slandered them,
And proved it, too, quite clear,
And half a dozen libel suits
Threw ended my career.
My father planked some money down
To give me one more chance,
I opened out a grocery store
And credit advanced;
For the way that they do business now
Compels a man to trust,
The consequences I relate!
In half a year I bust!
Since then I've been an auctioneer,
A civil service clerk,
A stumper at election times,
A preacher in the park;
A book agent, a hack driver,
A shoveler of snow,
I've advertised a fake recipe
To cause the hair to grow.
Although so many things I've tried
I've not been a success—
I've done loads of expensive
But ready cash far less;
And now at last the end has come,
Not far from my 19th opening out an office
For the sale of real estate!
