DEMOCRATIC ADDRESS.

To the People of the United States.

WASHINGTON, 5.—At a caucus of the democratic members of the House of Representatives held on the 3rd of March, 1877, in the hall of the House of Representatives, the following address was unanimously adopted:

L. Q. C. LAMAR, Chairman.
HENRY B. HANCOCK, Secretary.
WILLIAM M. ROBINSON, Secretary.

At a meeting of the members of the National Democratic Committee held on the 3rd day of March, 1877, the following address was unanimously adopted:

A. S. HEWITT, Chairman.
F. O. PRINCE, Secretary.

To the American People: We submit to the country the following review of the events which have transpired in the election of Rutherford B. Hayes as President of the United States.

In the late political canvass, two facts stood out prominently:

First—The republican party, true to its sectional nature, sought to carry the north against the south, and while engaged in that effort it was striving to make good its probable losses in the north by dividing the votes of the south.

This division sought to effect by unconstitutional use of the army in South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana.

Second—Troops were sent to those States when there was neither invasion nor domestic insurrection to require them, with legislatures easily to be convened. The only demand for their presence was made by the republican party.

The elections in these States, therefore, were held in the shadow of military power. The bayonets glinted at the polls. In depositing their ballots the citizens enjoyed only such liberty as the bayonet afforded.

In other States the elections were unusually peaceful. Immediately afterwards the result showed that the republican party had been chosen.

Of the whole republican vote received a majority of more than a quarter of a million, and of that Caucasian race which controls every other Christian and civilized government of the world they received a majority of more than one million. On the day succeeding the election it was announced by the chairman of the Republican National Convention that 185 Hayes electors had been chosen.

Nothing had then been learned of the election excepting the vote actually cast. It has never since been shown that the vote of the majority of the electors had been appointed.

Such announcement, therefore, could only have been made in pursuance of an arrangement to change the vote shown to have been given by the people. We charge that after the true result had been proclaimed a conspiracy was formed by the republican leaders to reverse the election and to change the vote shown to have been given by the people.
