

DIPHTHERIA.

To the Inhabitants of Salt Lake City:

The prevalence of diphtheria in this city and neighborhood seems to call for some action on the part of the quarantine authorities of the city to prevent, if possible, the spread of this disease. Though it is not deemed advisable at present to establish strict quarantine regulations respecting it, yet it is necessary to advise the adoption of such precautionary measures on the part of the inhabitants as will accomplish the object desired.

PREVENTIVES.

As prevention is better than cure, it is the duty of all to guard against disease, and especially is it the duty of parents and others who have children under their care to see that they are protected, as far as may be, from the ravages of the contagion now in our midst. Therefore, children should be warmly clad at this season of the year, in flannel if possible, not exposed to the cold winds of early morning or late evening, allowed plenty of good, healthy food, avoiding everything that will disarrange the stomach, plenty of fresh air and sunshine, their entire bodies kept clean by a free use of warm water and soap at least twice a week. Their sleeping rooms should be as large as possible, warm and well ventilated, but no child should be permitted to sleep in a current of night air.

EXPOSURE.

During the prevalence of epidemic diseases, children should be guarded against exposure to the infection. How to do his best will occur to each parent or guardian, as no special rules will apply to all circumstances, but some general suggestions may be profitable. Instruct children to avoid all contact with families who have diphtheria or other infectious diseases in their dwellings, not only during the prevalence of such disease but afterwards, until the dwelling, the clothing and the persons of such family are thoroughly disinfected. Children should not be permitted to attend the funerals, or come in contact with the remains of those who have died of diphtheria, scarlet fever or other contagious diseases.

CLEANLINESS.

As cleanliness is a great preventive of disease, all persons should see that their dwellings and the surrounding premises are thoroughly cleaned, removing all decaying vegetables from cellars and neighboring outhouses, and decayed vegetable or other foul matter from yards and gardens. Disinfect by burning sulphur inside the house, and by sprinkling carbolic acid in and around it, and fresh lime or chloride of lime or ashes on the outside and in all waterclosets and outhouses.

PHARYNGITIS.

There is now prevalent in this city, among children, a throat disease, known as pharyngitis, which is often mistaken for diphtheria, and though not attended with the same serious results as diphtheria, those attacked with it more readily contract that disease, the inflamed state of the tonsils and throat rendering the patient more sensitive to the latter contagion. Extra care should therefore be taken in such cases to prevent exposure to the more virulent disease.

CARRYING THE DISEASE.

As diphtheria is a specific contagion which, it is supposed, may be carried from place to place in the clothing, hair or beard, medical practitioners, nurses and other persons waiting upon diphtheritic patients cannot use too much precaution to prevent the spread of the disease. After leaving a house where diphtheria exists, and before visiting another house, especially where there are children, they should thoroughly disinfect themselves, lest that by negligence, they carry to families not before exposed the germs of disease and death. To those not acquainted with the process of disinfecting the person, it may be well to say, that disinfection may be easily accomplished by washing the hands, face, hair and beard with water in which a small amount of carbolic acid is dissolved; thoroughly brushing the clothing, boots, etc., and also brushing the hair and beard, and when practicable, by the removal of all outer garments which have been exposed to the contagion.

ISOLATION.

When diphtheria exists in a family where there are children other than those affected, those having the disease should be isolated so far as possible, and all communication with the other children cut off, and every means used to prevent the spread of the disease by disinfecting the dwelling and using such medicinal preventives as the parties interested may have confidence in. Neighbors and friends should not visit infected houses, any more than is necessary to render aid and assistance to those afflicted, and all such should adopt the disinfecting process heretofore suggested, but under no circumstances should children be permitted to visit infected houses.

AFTER DEATH.

When a death occurs from diphtheria, or other contagious disease, great care should be taken not to unnecessarily expose the remains. The house should be immediately fumigated, by burning sulphur therein. All clothing, bedding, carpets, etc., which have been used around the patient or been in the room occupied by it, should be well washed and boiled in a strong solution of chlorinated soda, or permanganate of potash and carbolic acid.

FUNERALS.

The funerals of those who die from diphtheria, scarlet fever or other infectious diseases, should be conducted as privately and with as few attendants as possible, and those only adults. The services should be held in rooms which have not been exposed to the infection, and which have been thoroughly fumigated and are well ventilated. The remains should not be taken into the room where the services are being held, and under no circumstances should they be exposed to view except through glass in the cover of the casket. Friends of the deceased should in such cases sacrifice their own feelings for the public welfare. The practice of holding the funeral services of those who have died of contagious diseases, in houses of public worship, or school-houses should be discontinued, as it is feared that such diseases may be disseminated through this means.

Respectfully submitted,
SEYMOUR B. YOUNG,
Quarantine Physician.

I fully endorse the above, and commend it to the consideration of the inhabitants of Salt Lake City.
FERAMORZ LITTLE, Mayor.

A GOOD PLAN

The most profitable plan for operating in stocks is that of uniting capital of various sums by combining or pooling the orders of thousands of customers, and using them as one mighty whole, which has been done so successfully by Messrs. Lawrence & Co., Bankers, 57 Exchange Place, N. Y. City. This co-operative system each investor is placed on an equal footing with the largest operator, and profits are divided pro rata among shareholders every 30 days. An investment of $10 would pay $50, making 5 per cent on the stock during the month. $25 would return $150, or 6 per cent; $100 would make $1,000, or 10 per cent; and so on, according to the market. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th, says: "The Combination method of operating in stocks is the most successful ever advertised."

New York Independent, Sept. 12th, says: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co." Brooklyn Journal, April 9th, says: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 on an investment of $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co's combinations." The firm's new circular (copyrighted and sent free) contains "Two unerring rules for success in stock operations," and explains everything. All kinds of Stock and Bonds wanted. New Government Loans supplied. Best references. Address, LAWRENCE & CO., Bankers and Brokers, 57 Exchange Place, New York City. w 40

GOLD MEDAL

has been awarded at the Paris Exposition of 1878

J. & P. COATS,

for their best Six-Cord Spool Cotton, confirming the estimate placed upon their goods at all the World's Expositions, from that at London, 1862, to the Centennial Exposition of 1876, where they took a diploma for "SUPERIOR STRENGTH AND EXCELLENT QUALITY."

The Second Prize of a Silver Medal was taken by the Williamite Linen Company, which claims to be the special champion of American industry, and which has extensively advertised a Grand Prize at Paris.

NO GRAND PRIZES were awarded for Spool Cotton at PARIS!

Messrs. J. & P. Coats have established in Pawtucket, R. I., the largest Spool Cotton Mills in the United States. Every process of manufacture, from the raw cotton to the finished spool, is conducted there. Their American-made Spool Cotton took the award at the Centennial, and while they have never claimed special merit for their American-made Spool Cotton over that manufactured in their Scotch Mills, we have the satisfaction of announcing that they have so identified themselves with this country, that

AMERICA, as represented by J. & P. COATS, is still AHEAD IN SPOOL COTTON. Machineless Brothers, Sole Agents in New York for J. & P. COATS
