

MISSOURI BIRD SAVES SALT LAKE

Ogden Nearly Sweeps the Boards Of Honors in Rhode Island Reds.

THE LIST OF PRIZE WINNERS

Many Poultry Show Ribbons Captured By New Encampers, While Old Breeders Are Shut Out.

Orson H. Hewlett, always closely associated with any noise that sounds like a greater Salt Lake, has once more saved the city from disaster.

Only the fact that a big red ribbon hangs on his bird at the poultry show, status between Ogden and every single prize of importance in the most hotly contested class of fowls on display. The Rhode Island red, new king of western fowls, is a strutting bird, and what a most beautiful one. At the show the just for blue and red ribbons has been faster among red owners than among most of the other classes combined. Salt Lake breeders who have spent years trimming their flocks to perfection and near perfection found themselves suddenly out in the cold this year. From Ogden a great dark cloud overhung their prospects in the shape of George A. Poulter. Five handsome pens of Rhode Island Reds, suddenly appeared among the contesting birds. Above one pen was tucked the notice, "First prize, Los Angeles, 1908." Above one pen was the enticing sentence, "First prize, Los Angeles, 1907." Nearby was a legend that put into the souls of Salt Lake aspirants: "George A. Poulter, breeder of exhibition birds." Splendid Rhode Island red reputations rested on the heads of many Salt Lake birds with a list of previous honors won, but when Judge Heimlich began to work among the coops, he picked out a young cockerel from Poulter's pen, then pinned on it the navy blue ribbon of superiority. Then he pulled out an older bird, and to this he pinned the same colored ribbon that meant there were none to equal its classiness. Then of the dozens of pens, he picked out a Poulter and pinned here, too, a third blue ribbon, and it looked as if Salt Lake was not only whipped completely but absolutely shut out of the game. A stray prize for a fourth best hen, or a third best pullet was the best that seemed untaken.

THE MISSOURI WONDER.

And here entered Orson Hewlett, unknown as a breeder, but anxious always to help along any good cause in the making of a greater Salt Lake. Under his arm was a Rhode Island Red rooster, beautiful in its plumage, and squarely built in its stocky dimensions. "This bird just came by rush express from St. Louis," he explained to his new friends. When I heard what this fellow Poulter was preparing to do to us Salt Lake birds I couldn't for the life of me see how we could let Ogden take a sweepstakes of first honors.

"The bird's just won a Missouri first so I guess he'll take something down out here, won't he?"

BIRD WAS TIRED.

And the judge came to the new wonder, with unknown name and a splendid record carefully concealed. "I cut him for the color of his eye," said the judge, and pinned a big red ribbon on him that meant he was second best, by one-fourth of a point, and with a good eye, would have led by a point. To finish a close second is something at least, and the red ribbon was a thing not to be scorned.

The bird was tired that night, and too recently of the express car to really primp up in form. The next day another prize was to be awarded. It was for the finest colored Rhode Island Red bird in the show. The judge walked past the Poulter coops this time, sized up all the fine Ogden feathers, and pinned the coveted symbol on Hewlett's St. Louis, Missouri, wonder. How times do change is suggested by the fact that Hewlett had also bought up the prize pen of two years ago in Salt Lake and it didn't even win the yellow ribbon of fourth merit.

YOUNG BLOOD TELLS.

A feature of the show is the elimination of well known breeders from the prize lists by younger men in the business, who have carried the standards of perfection one or two points higher. A. Betts, on his usual allotments of ribbons on Barred Rocks, sharing honors with T. J. Seddon, and led decidedly by W. H. Pincock, with three blue ribbons. Crawford Bros. of Mant made it a sweepstakes on Rose Combed Brown Leghorns. John Haslam took four blue ribbons on Black Minorcas, while Ed. J. Solomon was a large winner. Prizes were awarded for first, second, third and fourth honors, a blue, red, white and yellow ribbon indicating the classes respectively.

In some minor classes the absence of competitors reduces the value of the prizes one, one man for instance, taking everything in Polish birds without competition. The show is attracting many visitors today, and ladies are admitted without charge. Tomorrow the school children will be on hand, for a morning's visit.

WOMEN WRANGLE OVER CITY JOB

Mrs. Gifford and Mrs. Bero Show Why They Should Feed Prisoners.

WILL GIVE GAS A TRIAL.

Rival Concerns Will Install Test Series in Second South Street to Show How the Different Lights Work.

"I did."

"You didn't either."

"Well, I did, too."

"I know better, I-I-I."

Then the council committee on politics and prison thought it unwise to let newspapermen hear the belligerent feminine "American" politicians and the reporters were ordered from the room. It all came about at the regular meeting of the council committees last night and the matter at issue which caused the heated argument between the two women was the proposition of Mrs. Zella Gifford to serve the prisoners in the city jail at 10 cents per meal. Mrs. Mary Bero came forward with a bid to serve meals for 9 cents each. Mrs. Bero has the support of the Woman's American club and Mrs. Gifford is supported by J. Edgar Wilkinson—that is to say supported in this instance in that he furnishes his political weight in influence.

STAR CHAMBER SESSION.

When the committee started in to consider the matter of providing meals for the prisoners, Councilmen Reedall, Stewart and Wood took up the two applications. The relative weight of party service was weighed and the weighing thereof developed a remarkable display of feminine hatred, contempt, scorn, and all other sorts of evidence of bellicose dispositions. Then the four councilmen named decided to hold a star chamber session. They ordered the reporters from the committee room and proceeded with their argument. Nobody knows just what happened in that committee room except the members of the star aggregation, but from the noises which came from inside and which could be heard in the council chamber, it is presumed that the light waxed even more feverish than it did before the secret session was decided upon. It was all to no avail, apparently. When the committee came from the rooms, it had nothing to report and it will probably be delinquent next Monday evening, when its recommendation in the matter was expected to reach the council.

TO GIVE GAS A TRIAL.

The committee on improvements, municipal laws and finance took up the Martin resolution providing for a contract with the Utah Gas & Coke company for the installation of gas arc lights in State street up through Canyon road to Second avenue and then east to West street and also in Second South street from State street to Tenth East. At once Councilman Hall moved that the gas portion of the resolution be stricken out, and that so far as it referred to luminous arc lights that it be sent to the council with a recommendation for adoption. The outcome was that the committee will be shown the gas arc by the gas company, Manager Ross explaining that he wanted the council to know what he was offering them and that he would be glad to "pull off an exhibit." The fact that there was chance "to be the man from Joplin," and the trials will be conducted tonight.

TALK ABOUT SMOKE.

During the evening there was talk about smoke and smoke ordinances. Asst. Atty. P. J. Daly was asked why the smoke ordinance was not enforced. Mr. Daly remarked that as the city attorney's office was not composed of policemen he could not see the enforcement of the ordinance is "up to Tom and his bluecoats."

WAITING AT CAMP'S LANE.

Mark Reedall, chairman of the committee on engineering and sewerage, was besieged by residents of Camp's lane, asking the council to provide against floods there next spring. The committee and the city engineer have been working on a proposition for some time and are in hopes of arriving at a solution of the difficulty within a short time. The petitioners were again told to wait. The wall coming from them is that they are, have been and expect to be that—and that they expect nothing more, despite the promises made.

DISPUTE OVER RENT.

Well Known Mining Man Arrested on Charge of Battery.

E. E. Shelley, former president of the Mines & Realty company, was arrested yesterday afternoon late on the charge of battery upon Charles E. Taylor, a well known real estate man.

The trouble between the two men grew out of a dispute over a sum of money due for rent. Taylor says that Mrs. Shelley entered his office in the Commercial club building and tendered a sum of money for rent but that the amount was not sufficient and he declined to take it. Later Shelley came in and demanded a receipt for the amount offered. Taylor says when he refused to accept it Shelley attacked him. The case will be heard in Judge Diehl's court on the 26th of this month.
