

WESTERN NOTES.

The short-hand report of the second trial of Mrs. Fair covers 1,998 pages.

There are now more than 2,300 pictures of rogues in the photograph albums in the office of the chief of Police of San Francisco.

Washington Territory has nineteen water and two steam flouring mills, capable of turning out about 900 barrels of flour per day.

Two couples were married at one time by an Olympia justice the other day. Both stood on the floor and went through the ceremony simultaneously.

Mrs. Clark, who edits a newspaper at Sacramento, goes for Train for President, and excitedly exclaims:

"Never mind platforms. We want a man!"

Three families of immigrants from Fort Scott, Kansas, who left there the 15th of April last, and came all the way across the plains in wagons, passed Boise City September 19th on their way to Lane county, Oregon.

Washington Territory has forty saw mills with an aggregate capacity to turn out 650,000 feet of lumber per day. She has in all 53 lumber mills. The largest is at Port Gamble, which has a capacity of 100,000 feet per day—running thirty-five saws. There are twelve mills, each of which can turn out upwards of 25,000 feet per day.

Apple trees are blooming for the second time in the neighborhood of Gilroy. In several instances the apples are beginning to form. The Gilroy Advocate attributes the bloom in that vicinity to irrigation, facilities for which have lately been amply furnished by the water company of that place. The Tulare Times states that the oak trees in that county are robing themselves in a new dress of foliage.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Geo. Augustus Sala says he has proposed toasts to "the ladies" in nineteen different countries and sixteen different languages.

The discovery of a 16 feet by 16 inches wrought iron pillar at Delhi, Northern India, with discoveries of other massive forgings proves that the ancients knew a thing or two as well as the moderns.

An exchange thinks that the marriage of the Princess Beatrice, the last unmarried daughter of Queen Victoria, to the Marquis of Stafford, eldest son of the Duke of Sutherland, and cousin to the Marquis of Lorne, would be ill received by a large portion of the aristocracy, notably the great Tory families, who would naturally feel "left out in the cold," and complain that a liberal government had brought about these matrimonial "jobs" to gratify its own powerful partisans.

Of London preachers, Mr. Cuyler tells us Spurgeon and Newman Hall take the lead in popularity and wide evangelic influence. Neither of these two remarkable men can carry one additional "pound of steam." Both are worked up to their utmost capacity; both are felt throughout Britain, and, indeed, the whole civilized world. When Newman Hall's new chapel is completed, his church accommodations—in the old and new buildings combined—will even surpass Mr. Spurgeon's. Neither Hall nor Spurgeon has much of wealth or social "aristocracy" in the regular congregation. But people of rank and high culture go, by scores, to hear them every Sabbath.

The women of the old town of Anjou are celebrated for their art in folding linen. The renown is an odd one, but it has, nevertheless, bestowed no mean celebrity on the ladies of Angers. The art does not flourish now as it used, and is, indeed, nearly confined to the grand old housekeepers of the grand old chateaux of the place. The linen presses of a magnificent Gothic hospital still show, too, some chefs d'œuvre of the kind. The good sisters throw open the doors of their immense cupboards with a natural feeling of pride, and reveal to the astonishment and admiration of the visitors the wonders of their dexterity. In a vast sheet, folded into a trough, twenty-four sheep, formed of chemises, are drinking, guarded by a night dress in the shape of a shepherd, and so on. Linen castles, windmills, towers and abys are frequent tours de force of these dexterous linen folders.

In coursing over Great Britain we are all struck with the immense culture of trees. They are cash articles and ever will be for kindling coal fires, if no higher purpose were contemplated. We are cutting and hacking them down as though they encumbered the ground. Every range of fence with us, as there, should be studded with trees. It should be a spring and autumn duty to extend their transplantation. Our farmers ought to have it impressed upon them that such labor would yield a harvest in the future far exceeding their expectations by laborious efforts with uncertain crops whose value must always vary in volume and value upon the contingencies of the weather. Trees grow tall regardless of seasons. They are a sure crop. Another observable feature in land culture that contrasts strongly with our own is the general employment of horses instead of oxen.—Dr. J. V. C. Smith.

in Utah and giving perfect satisfaction. In the Canyons they stand without a rival for lightness of draft and durability. I warrant them for one year and stand ready to make good all defects both of timber and workmanship. The demand hitherto has been so great that I could not keep supplied, but from this on I hope to be able to fill all orders promptly and at prices as low as any first-class Wagon. I hope my many friends will give me a call before purchasing elsewhere. I have removed from my old stand to the lot adjoining the 13th Ward Assembly Rooms where I shall be pleased to see my old customers and as many new ones as will favor me with a call.

In addition to the above I have a full line of Wagon Timber and Iron of the very best quality at the Lowest Prices, also Horse and Mule Shoes, Corn Shellers, Cane Mills, Hay Presses, &c., &c. Note the address, immediately West of 13th Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, w32 1m S. W. SEARS.
