

MAY MEAN RATE READJUSTMENT

Traffic Officials Say Spokane Decision Will Entail Complete Revision.

CHICAGO SHIPPERS BENEFIT

Claim to Have Won Decisive Victory Over Competitors in New York—Effect is Very Far Reaching.

Chicago, March 5.—The Tribune today prints the following news article: "Chicago shippers are congratulating themselves on having won an important victory over their competitors in New York and the east through the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Spokane rate case."

"Complete copies of the decision which was issued in Washington on Tuesday have been received and after comparison of the old with the new rates established by the commission the Chicago commercial interests discovered they had obtained an advantage over New York by the reduction of 16.23 per cent while the eastern rates were not changed. Formerly the rates on eastern commodities virtually were the same from Chicago as from the seaboard."

"The reduction on this class of commodities is from 2.00 to $1.45, down from 98 cents to 82 cents on class E. Similar reductions are made on the commodities named in the complaint, but the far reaching effect of the decision is seen in the statement that if the roads do not readjust the rates on other commodities and to other intermediate points another complaint may be filed."

"Traffic officials say the decision means a complete readjustment of rates in the western intermediate territory. Similar complaints are pending before the commission in regard to Nevada, to Phoenix, Ariz. and Reno, Nevada, and there are many other cities, the rates of which are made on the same basis as the Spokane rates, namely: the transcontinental rate to the coast which was fixed to meet water competition, plus the local rate back."

J. B. Bean Chosen Secretary and Treasurer of S. L. & O.

J. B. Bean, for many years connected with the Salt Lake & Ogden railroad, has been chosen to succeed the late Joseph Oberndorfer as secretary of the railroad company. The board of directors held a meeting Wednesday afternoon, when this step was decided upon. Mr. Bean was also elected treasurer of the company, which is in the way of a reorganization. The recipient of the new honor is a man who has always been active in his connection with the road, and who has made a host of friends for the Salt Lake & Ogden. His promotion is a fitting recognition of his services with the road.

WANTS BIG CROPS PLANTED.

Crows to be Here During Grand Army Encampment Will Need Much Food.

In order to provide foodstuff for the great number of visitors who will be in this city at the time of the annual Grand Army encampment and also the great number of travelers on their way to and from the coast during the exposition at Seattle, Col. E. M. Stewart has begun a campaign with the farmers and gardeners of the state, urging them to plant large crops of staple vegetables and to use their best endeavors to obtain large truck crops. As in the past supply of crops in other lines during previous camps have taught him that an inadequate supply of fruits and vegetables is serious and early efforts must be made to overcome the possibility of such a shortage.

DAVID EVANS SAYS DEMAND INCREASES

Prohibition Sentiment is Steadily Growing in California.

"The sentiment in favor of absolute prohibition in the state of California is growing right along," said David Evans today. Mr. Evans has just returned from that state. He met the Elks' excursion at Pomona and received fresh proofs there that prohibition is gaining all the time. "While we were there," he said, "I rode around the town with one of the most prominent citizens of the town, who assured me that the drug store, which were handing liquor for a time, have been forced to quit the business. It shows that this great movement is growing. It is gathering force, and it has come to stay. The people want it, and they will have it."

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATER

Theater—Last night at the Salt Lake Theater, the last of the Gilbert Parkers' series, "The Right of Way," came into actual being, and walked, talked and acted the motives and passions so splendidly portrayed in the book.

The interest revolves about two characters, the Charley Steele of Guy Standing and Joe Portuguese of Theodore Roberts, and if the author had purposed these two characters for the stage, the stronger case could have been chosen for the representation of human motive and character.

Gilbert Steele, cynic, philosopher, atheist, scholar, man of the world, with his unfeeling sneer at life's vanities, unyielding and unmovable, and his anti-morals, Portuguese, alive only with the unquenching and unquenching passions of the human animal, played upon by motives of hate, murder, doglike devotion and the religious superstitions which keep him writhed with the pain and suffering of unconfessed sin, stand for two great types in human character, and it is not too much to say that the most who studied these roles in Peabody's dramatic interpretation of the story fully come up to the serious requirements of the text.

Coffee Aids Vanish Before Postum.

It seems almost too good to be true, the way headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many other ailments in the morning, when coffee is discarded and Postum used as the regular beverage.

The reason is clear. Coffee contains a poisonous drug—caffeine, which causes the trouble. Postum contains only the food elements in clean hard wheat, with a little New Orleans molasses.

Philip, man grew enthusiastic recently and wrote as follows: "Until 18 months ago I used coffee regularly every day and suffered from headache, bitter acid in my stomach, and indigestion; was gloomy and listless, had variable or absent appetite, loss of flesh, depressed in spirit, etc. I attribute these things to coffee because since I have drunk Postum I feel better than I have for 25 years, am now susceptible to cold, have gained 20 pounds, and all the above symptoms have disappeared—vanished before Postum." There's a Reason!

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Well-being," in pages of Postum.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ing sole with its play of ferocious instinct dominant alike in the passages of hate and of friendship and pity, is little less than great; and Guy Standing, polished, keen-witted and cynical in his first scene and afterward touched with the tender motives of love and friendship is a worthy shaver in his laurels. One lapse from seeming requirement is his show of heat in the passage in which Katharine's uncle, a kind of Steele's knowledge of the actual attraction existing between his wife and the old lover. It is inconceivable indifference for the woman he has married, his knowledge that he has not her love and his general accepted attitude of dispassionate resignation and comment upon the motives of the world at large. With this one seeming inconsistency excepted, Mr. Standing's portrayal is masterly throughout. The women of the cast have little opportunity, but the Saxon and Pauline were excellently done, and the French girl, a convincing portrayal of the innocent, and loving village girl, while the short part of Katharine was effective to its brief sketch of the wife hardened with the cynicism and coldness reflected from the situation to whom her life was linked. Walter Colman and Sidney Cushing gave excellent support as Jack Brown and Billy Wantage the two men for whose ruin Steele is responsible, and the Cure and Abby of Ayrill Harris and Edson R. Miles were in good hands. Justice Wantage as Katharine's guardian, smarting under the sense of Steele's conduct and the unpopularity of his niece did well in his short part, and Price, the servant, stood out definitely in his character role. The minor parts were well cast, and the entire production admirable. The staging in the last four acts, was superb. All the witshery of the Canadian wilds was in the atmosphere of river and mountain seen through the windows of the Cafe Dorion and the hut on the mountains where Steele lives his chained life and in the last scene, the atmospheric hints of the forest and the light on water and mountain changing from grey dawn to sunrise in a drama in itself. In the exciting and in act throughout the play the dramatic has taken liberties with the text of the book, but these changes are most palatable and serve to illustrate, if anything, clearer than Parker's rather lengthy prose, the motive aimed at in this story, the redemptive influence of love in a heart coloured by skepticism and cynicism.

A large audience greeted the play from the first, and brought out the principal characters in repeated curtain calls.

Orchestra—This is a lovely night at Grand—McLellan is making such a hit at the Elwood that he has been engaged for next week with an entire change of bill.

Our Boy's Department In a class by itself—almost

Of the twenty-five thousand or more stores and departments in the United States selling boys' apparel we doubt if there be twenty-five—or one-tenth of one per cent—that can truthfully make the claim to distinction as made by this department in the Keith-O'Brien store—namely—not an old suit in the store—not a suit shown in this department for spring that is not absolutely new—direct from the tailor shops and factory in New York—within the last thirty days.

Is this worth anything to you?
