GENERAL.

NEW YORK, 28.—Special accounts represent that the opening scenes in the Syracuse convention were of a shameful character. One report states that when the delegates gathered in the hall, they found the doors barred, bolted, and guarded by several policemen obstructing their entrance. A cry was at once set up and the Custom house brought its marshal.

A voice was heard in the crowd, "Are there any gatling guns here." When the door was opened at half past eleven, a rush commenced which was met from the inside. Chairs and table legs were freely used by the defenders of the citadel, and fists and canes by the attacking party, and at last one of the latter drew a pistol, but before he could use it he was felled to the floor by a blow from the back of one of the iron seats, laying his cheek open and putting him hors de combat. At this juncture a detachment of police arrived, who, no doubt, prevented much bloodshed. As the attacking force was constantly increasing in numbers, the resistance from within could not have been maintained much longer.

Another dispatch says that a gang of New York roughs came into town during the night and early morning and it was evident there would be serious trouble if not actual bloodshed at the opening of the door. About half past eleven, when the confusion began, several revolvers were drawn and flourished by parties in the crowd outside, while those inside tore loose furniture apart and stood ready with legs of tables and chairs to club the intruders. "Put down those pistols," "Don't shoot," "Don't shoot," "Kill the son of a—," "Kill him," "Blow his brains out," "Open the door," "Not a d—d one of you will get in," "You'll all get in," and other ejaculations more expressive than elegant were indulged in until the place seemed more like Bedlam.

There was much surprise last night among the Greeley adherents in this city at the course taken by the convention.

Expressions of dissatisfaction at the apparent timidity shown by the Greeley and Fenton delegation were very general. It was believed they would have defeated the Conklin party had they acted with becoming boldness, affording a safe and uniform currency, and absolute security to bill-holders; a policy of extending government aid to States for improving their rivers, and harbors; absolute payment of all obligations to the government; a sufficient yearly reduction of the national debt to convince the world of the determination ultimately to extinguish it, while, at the same time, to carefully avoid burdening the people with onerous and unnecessary taxation; endorsing the administration of President Grant and in favor of his re-nomination.

PORTLAND, Oregon.—U. S. Marshal Young, while arresting a Chinawoman, last evening, was resisted, by a number of Chinamen, one of the party, named Lu Su, was shot badly by the Marshal. A coroner's jury fully exonerated Marshal Young.

SAN DIEGO, 27.—Private correspondence, dated Camp Grant, 21st, says Vincent Collyer arrived at that place on the 18th inst. The same day an order was issued by the department warning any party of citizens who approached nearer than ten miles of the post that they would be fired upon by the troops. A party of prospectors from Tucson, who had traveled thirty miles without water, could only obtain water by passing through Camp Grant to the river, were ordered off, and three cannons were brought out, shotted and placed in a commanding position; the long roll was beaten and the troops put in readiness for action. The commanding officers were fully advised by Capt. Dunne, U. S. A., Dr. Wilbur and others that the citizens were on a peaceable mission and willing to surrender their arms, or anything to get water. They were not permitted to approach. A limited supply of water was furnished them by the commander. It is reported that Governor Safford and party were about to come, and it was declared he would be treated the same as the Tucson prospectors had been.

PARIS, 25.—The journals to-day have reports of the discovery of a conspiracy in Paris, for the restoration of Napoleon. It is stated that Napoleon's prefect of police, Pietri, was at the head of the conspiracy here, and he was acting under the direct instructions of the Emperor.

Correspondence.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sep. 25, 1871.

Editor Evening News:—"A man who acknowledges a thing to be morally right, yet, when an unjust law requires him to violate his conscience, squirms and twists around and shrinks down to the size and shape of the unrighteous law, demonstrates beyond the possibility of cavil that his spinal column is not composed of bone, but at the best of nothing firmer than gristle. The world's heroes have bone in their backs, law or no law."

The above extract from Friday's daily News, so plainly states the case, that it is doubtful if it could be improved upon, and so exactly fits the present emergency, that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err, in reading, to get the idea that the writer wished to convey.

History contains no account of the success of the "limber back" heroes of bygone times, however laudable may have been the enterprises in which they were engaged, the natural result was a general caving in, from the pressure of surrounding circumstances, at some point, in its history; the wreck and the debris of the effort have been left to float along with the current, hither and thither, to eventually become landmarks, for the instruction of future generations, of the folly of allowing every current of popular will, to drive to the wall some idea fraught with good to humanity. Men with limber backs are not needed in the front line of the struggle, but rather men who have counted the cost, know the danger, and coolly discharge the duties devolving upon them.

The English language contains no words sufficiently strong to express the contempt that should be meted out to a man, who, while the sailing was smooth, was a staunch advocate of an idea, but the moment any breakers interfered, then, he had been misled, and mistaken, and deceived, etc.

However strong may be the effort that is being made to cause trouble in Utah to-day, there can be no danger as long as men are men, and true to the trust reposed in them. Men, weak in the knees and the back, cowardly at heart, may shrink down to the size of the law, and purchase a most ignoble safety, by forfeiting their claim to respect, in the midst of their brethren, but the true man will assert his manhood, and demand his rights, in the face of the storm that seeks his overthrow. There is something superlatively grand in the stand taken by the true heroes of history in defense of the inalienable rights of mankind, and something insufferably contemptible in the Benedict Arnolds, whose names blot and mar the fair pages of the records of the past.

Ten men, true and tried, are of greater force than ten thousand, whose spinal columns are formed of a continuation of hinges, liable at any moment to double up and leave the possessor in a state of dreadful uncertainty as to what may be the result of what is going on around them.

The history of every great achievement is simply the history of the strong arms and brave hearts of the true men, who in the face of every obstacle carried their ideas, by the force of will, onward to ultimate success.

Let us hope that the cases of "gristle backbones" in the present struggle may be limited.

Respectfully, BACKBONE.

LONDON, Sept. 8th, 1871.

Dear Brother R. F. Nealen:—I was much pleased to receive your kind and welcome letter, and have read it well about amongst the folks, who were all as pleased as myself.

Bro. Brinton is quietly pursuing the even tenor of his way. Our conference is to be held (D.V.) at the old hall in Hoxton, on Sunday, Oct. 8th, concert at Albion Hall on the Monday evening after. Br. Perry is choir master this time. President Carrington is expected to be with us.

I have been keeping up out-door preaching this season on week evenings. My companions have been old Father Fraser and Bro. Henry Wilson. Sometimes we have been listened to without opposition, at other times the pot has boiled over tremendously, one night in particular Brother Wilson was talking, and talking pretty well too, to my taste, but the storm began all at once—"You're a liar." "False doctrine." "How many wives have you got?" "What's the use of chattering to us when we have no faith?" "Bonnet them!" "Hustle them off," &c.

I saw it wouldn't do to leave in that way so I asked them to listen to me for a moment, and I fortunately succeeded in calming them down. In the end we left on capital terms. The Lord just gave me the right thing to say that time, or we should have been driven ingloriously off the field.

God bless you and yours. Give my love to all other friends. I remain your brother in the covenant of Christ. G. C. FERGUSON.

The Epoca, of Geneva, says Don Carlos is in that city, waiting for the International Socialists' insurrection to wrap the country in flames, when he proposes to rally his friends, and, quenching the fire, take advantage of the gratitude of the people to place himself on the throne with their consent.

A newly married man down east says that if he had an inch more of happiness he could not possibly live. His wife is obliged to roll him on the floor and pat him with a brick bat every day to keep him from being too happy.
