

alty than killing Piskang, the silent senator from Columbia, who, being asleep, was unaware of the circumstance. Mr. Hactaris loudly protested against Mr. Gloggs' shooting at him on a second reading, as being out of order, which, strictly speaking, may have been the case.

Mr. Wacklinburg (Va.) thought that they were discussing the bill with almost too much heat.—The Railway was wanted.

Mr. Binckes would be darned if it was.

Mr. Wacklinburg wanted it himself. (laughter.) But, as it seemed to him, the only objection to the bill was, that the undertakers of the railroad were a parcel of beggarly bankrupt loafers, who would never edify a pile or a rail.

Mr. Branding (Ohio) was happy to be able to inform the honorable member that he was an infernal falsehood monger, and that among the promoters were men of the most impassioned intellect, and who sighed for the good of their glorious country with the most ardent aspirations.

A Voice.—He means perspiration.

Mr. Branding knew that ribald throat, and dared its owner to stand up.

The gigantic Luke V. Black, of Delaware, here heaved his ponderous proportions into the air, but Senator Branding seemed to discover that he had something very engrossing to whisper to his next neighbor, and managed not to see the Delaware Hercules, who finally sat down not much the worse for having accepted the defiance.

Mr. Sprittle (Vt.) said that although it was as patent as the sun in the blue hemisphere, that their debates were worthy of an enlightened nation, and a pattern to the corrupt and bigoted British parliament, he thought they lost time.—He was for business, and would clench the matter by registering his solemn oath, which he did in the face of eternal creation, that whoever tried to get that bill passed he would kick through yonder mahogany.

Mr. Sloddy was not to be bullied by a lop-sided crawfish from the Green Mountains. He begged to move, with unmitigated disdain, that the Old Hoss and Bunkum bill be read a second time.

A Warning Voice from the Stomach.

I have gently hinted that this don't suit me, and that don't please me; that this comes too late and that too soon; that you give me too little of this, and too much of that; and, rather than complain without cause, I have worked off load after load, time after time, until I can bear it no longer—and I won't. I hate to complain as much as you hate to hear me; but if you take me to be a sausage-mill, and able to chew up anything—from a rat to a sea-lion, or from sheet-iron beef steak to India-rubber cheese—I say, again, that you are mistaken.

Now, I want to ask you, in all candor, what you take me to be? A stomach—a stomach to digest food—to make whatever you choose to give me into good, healthy blood, so that you may have the materials for building up a vigorous and healthy body, and which my neighbor, the heart, can receive, and circulate to every part of it, for that purpose. Now, let me ask why you—knowing me to be a stomach, and a stomach only—will impose upon me the duties of the teeth?

Would you like to do another's work, when it is quite as much as you want—and perhaps little more—to do your own? No; I know you wouldn't. Then, why do you seek to compel me? You don't compel me? But I know you do; at least, you leave me but one alternative—to digest whatever you like to give me, in whatever shape it comes, or pass it to my neighbor for him to work it off; and rather than do that, I have many times cast up my accounts, and thrown up the contract; and I want you to understand that if we are your servants, we are not your slaves—or, at least, we ought not to be—and as we are fellow-servants, we do not wish to be so mean as to shirk our part of the labor—to put it on the shoulders of the next beneath us—and it is your fault that the teeth do it and they are not to blame.

You haven't time? Shame on you! Have you time to live?—time to suffer all the pains that we necessarily inflict upon you? You find time to loll about; time to pick your teeth; time to smoke cigars, or chew tobacco; in short, you find time to do nothing, yet everything you shouldn't. Then, again, do you suppose that I can make good blood out of anything, or everything, or nothing? You don't suppose it!

One would think that you did suppose it, by the vast varieties of odds and ends you give me, but which, often, your dog would not eat! * * I want to be a reasonable kind of stomach, and a good servant, and, it may be possible, that, if you are willing to do what is right by me, I may do my best to serve you: I do not want to be all the while grumbling, and giving you headaches, cholera, dyspepsia, and, in short, nearly every disease to which men are subject, but wish to lead a peaceable life with you as well as with my neighbors.

The stomach "throws out" a few suggestions as to how it thinks it ought to be treated, some of which, certainly, seem very reasonable and proper:—"As soon as you are out of bed, give me a glass of good water. In about half-an-hour after that I suppose you'll want your breakfast, and I some work to do, as I don't believe in working with an empty stomach any more than you do, when I am well."

You sit down, then, to breakfast, and give me something tender and nutritious as meat, and something light and wholesome as bread; and I suppose you would like a cup of coffee, but I don't need anything of that sort. Be sure to be very moderate. Do not, as the head of the firm, keep importing cargo, because there happens to be plenty, nor keep stowing it down as if the warehouse was made of India-rubber; because, if you do, I have no alternative but to put it in some place that does not belong to me, or unship it by the way it came; neither of which is very pleasant either to yourself or to me. At dinner, also, be very moderate.

Soup, if good, is not amiss, as I prefer this to cold water, for the reason that cold of any kind lowers my temperature, so that I cannot work willingly until I am warmed up again. Then, after soup, take something that I can do something with. Don't load me with all sorts of messes and mixtures, from all parts of the world, merely because you would appear of importance to those who may be on a visit to you. I am, in such a case, and at such a time, of much more importance to you than can possibly be your guest, and I wish you to remember that; and the moment I begin to be felt, let nothing tempt you to giving me more, for I have then as much as I know well what to do with.

At supper—be most careful, for as the day draws to a close, I, as well as other members of the firm, am weary with my day's labor, and do not like to be taxed with additional work when I should be at rest; therefore, give me something very light to do, and something that does not want steam applied for its transit, that I may not torment you with horrid dreams, or tossing and unrefreshing sleep.

What I have suffered from this cause no one can fully tell; for, will you believe it, even late at night, I have been obliged to bear piles of heavy and indigestible stuff, that I could not dispose of in a morning, without fatiguing me with more labor than I ought to be called upon to perform all day. And then my next-door neighbor lays the blame at my door. If all sorts of diseases arise, as they do, from my being abused, do you not think the 'time' and attention well employed that is bestowed upon me?

Yea, verily it is; and when you arise next morning with a violent headache, and a mouth uncomfortable, with heaviness and languor having possession of your whole body, don't you put the blame on me, for you are to blame, and you only. For, if you will over-load and over-task and abuse me in all sorts of ways, by all kinds of things, then remember that sooner or later I shall serve you out—perhaps in some way you don't expect of me.—[Hutchings's Cal. Mag.]

Speed of the Camel.

Mehemet Ali, when hastening to his capital to accomplish the destruction of the Mamelukes, rode, without changing his camel, from Suez to Cairo, a distance of eighty-four miles, in twelve hours.—A French officer in the service of the Pasha repeated the same feat in thirteen hours, and two gentlemen of my acquaintance have performed it in less than seventeen.

Laborer traveled the distance in the same dromedary from a point opposite Cairo to Alexandria, a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles, in thirty-four hours. But the most extraordinary well authenticated performance of the dromedary is that recorded by the accurate Burckhardt in his travels. The owner of a fine dromedary laid a wager that he would ride the animal from Esneh to Kench, and back, a distance of one hundred and twenty-five miles, between sun and sun. He accomplished one hundred and fifteen miles, occupying more than twenty minutes in crossing and re-crossing the Nile by ferry, in eleven hours, and then gave up the wager.

Burckhardt thinks this dromedary would have traveled one hundred and eighty or two hundred miles in twenty-four hours without serious injury. The valuable paper extracted from the notes of Gen. Harlan, and printed in the U. S. Patent Office Report of 1853, Agriculture, 61, states that the ordinary day's journey of the dromedary of Cabul is sixty miles, but that packed animals will travel one hundred miles a day for several days in succession, their greatest speed being about ten miles an hour.

The Syrian deloul goes in five days from Bagdad to Sokhne, a distance which the loaded caravans require twenty-one days to perform, or from the same city to Aleppo in seven, the caravans generally taking twenty-five. Couriers have ridden, without change of dromedary, from Cairo to Mecca in eighteen days, while the ordinary camels seldom accomplish the journey in less than forty-five. Layard gives several instances of apparently remarkable performances, but, as the distances are not stated, it is not easy to compare them with those recorded by other authors.

A late and apparently creditable writer says:—"I knew a camel driver who had bought a dromedary belonging to a sheriff of Mecca, lately deceased at Cairo. This animal often made the round trip between that city and Suez, going and returning in twenty-four hours, thus traveling a distance of sixty leagues in a single day." The performance of the dromedary is rather understated by the writer. The actual distance between Cairo and Suez is eighty-four English miles, and the animals must consequently have accomplished one hundred and sixty-eight miles in twenty four hours. He remained four hours at Suez to rest, and therefore traveled at the rate of eight miles and four-tenths per hour.

Upon longer journeys, the daily rate of the best dromedaries, though not equal to these instances, is still extraordinary. A French officer of high rank and character in the Egyptian service, assured me that he had ridden a favorite dromedary ninety miles in a single day, and five hundred in ten. Mails have been carried from Bagdad to Damascus, upon the same animals, four hundred and eighty-two miles in seven days; and one occasion, by means of regular relays, Mehemet Ali sent an express to Ibrahim Pasha, Cairo to Antioch, five hundred and sixty miles, in five days and a half.

But the most remarkable long journey on record is that of Col. Cheney, of the British army, who rode with three companions, and without change of camel, from Basrah to Damascus, a distance of nine hundred and sixty miles, in nineteen days and three or four hours, thus averaging fifty miles per day, the animals having no food but such as they gathered for themselves during the halts of the party. These dromedaries average forty-five steps a minute, giving a speed of about three and one third miles per hour.
