GOVERNMENT ENGINEERING AGENT.

W. H. Graves in Salt Lake En Route to the Uintah Reservation Country.

There arrived in this city last evening W. H. Graves, inspector on the irrigation and engineering of the government Indian department. Mr. Graves is en route to the Uintah reservation, and comes direct from Shoshone after having visited the Crow reservation in Montana, where the antiquated red man of that section is occupying his time in the construction of a big irrigation canal.

Mr. Graves says, by far the greater part of his work has been completed. The canal is 60 miles long and at places is 16 feet wide, and 24 feet deep. It is calculated to reclaim fifty thousand acres of new and old tillable land. The scheme of building the canal is apparently originated with the Indians themselves and not with the government. They have performed all the labor, and in a manner that reflects high credit upon their judgment and ability. The canal is said to be one of the best in the country, and they are in all eight similar projects under way.

The Indians of that portion of the country invest all of their surplus means in the canal fund, and are likely augmented their investment. In this year of inspection, Mr. Graves will travel more than thirty thousand miles covering ninety different reservations. He has been in the Uncompahgre and Uintah reservations from Montana, and will not receive his instructions until after the Southern trip. He is therefore unaware of the duty he will have to perform for the Utah Indians.

THE LEGISLATIVE PLUMS

Politicians Already Preparing to Plank and Distribute the Fruit.

OUTSIDE MEMBERS WANT THEIR SHARE.

Say That Salt Lake May Furnish Chief Clerkships, but After that Must be Satisfied With What it Can Get.

Now that the election is over and the smoke of battle is cleared away, leaving the political horizon unobscured with the clouds of strife that are created when one party is pitted against another, the successful members are being besieged with divers petitioners aspiring for expenditive positions of every kind within their gift; party leaders are asked to endorse this individual and that; members of the state and county committee are forcibly and persistently reminded how John Jones backed indifferent points to the registrars, and how Sam Brown herded the self-same voters to the polls on election day, and how he, therefore, is entitled to have his name written somewhere on the calendar of political remembrance.

Just how much this kind of activity has annoyed Chairman Moyle and Lloyd, these gentlemen do not care to state. When the subject is mentioned to them, they sigh deeply and a tear-away look steals into their eyes. It is patently convinced that the lot of the political pilot is not necessarily a happy one. They are supposed to have pole with many if not all the successful candidates, and the place-hunters make it interesting for them in their continuous efforts to get them enlisted in their cause.

In this connection the organization of the State Legislature is attracting a good deal of attention, and it is not uninteresting to note that all of the possibilities is not with the unelected Home of the solons themselves are worrying about the presidency and speakership chairs. A number of the members of this county alone, it is reported, are anxious for such distinction to be placed upon their shoulders. Of course, they cannot all be successful. Two or three others have had their names suggested, but each of them has stated that he preferred the freedom of the floor to being elevated to positions entailed him there. As to the personnel of the presiding officers there can be nothing more definite than speculation, for the time for that is unexpired. However, Hon. Aquila Nebeker of Rich county was presiding officer of the upper branch during the last Legislature and it is quite generally reported that he may take the place again should he desire it.

In the lower branch Ogden furnished the speaker in the person of Mr. Forster. But it is not thought that the Weber county delegation will put much figure in the organization of the Legislature while the state's interest of its being in accord with a majority of the members. This may and may not make it easier for Salt Lake to secure the position. Members of the capital city and county are bearing in mind the fact that they are numerically weaker than the combined forces from the outside. They have often found out to their manifest sorrow and regret in the past, when the majority of the aforesaid gentry of some proposed measure that concerned them very much.

As to the secretaryship of the Senate and the chief clerkship of the House, Salt Lake may be depended upon for putting up a strong fight. It will also have candidates for the minute clerks for other branch. Two years ago the former positions were filled by John H. Hansen and Mat Thomas, respectively. These gentlemen will not be out in the race this year as one of them has been elected a House member himself and the other is pursuing a course of law at Ann Arbor, Mich. The minute clerks of the Senate and House were Mr. C. M. Jackson and Joseph Cohen. Mr. Cohen, who during the campaign, was a member of the State committee, it is understood, will be a candidate for the Senate secretaryship. It is further said he will have a strong backing for the place.

Already some of the country members who have visited Salt Lake have served notice that they will not be content with the city members that they must not expect too much in the way of patronage; that in fact, if they secure the chief clerkship they will be highly favored. They admit that the best circuit built can scarcely be furnished by the outlying located communities. But when it comes to the assistant-sergeants-at-arms, janitors and messengerships they contend that the talent they can supply is the good as that which comes from the cities.

In the county offices there is not likely to be great change in the personnel of the working forces as a large number of the old officials have been returned and will keep most of their old deputies in their employ. Two or three important changes are, however, expected, and in all probability will occur. The prospects are that they would have been done some time ago but the chiefs of departments already appointed are of the old sayings of Abraham Lincoln that it was still a good thing to trade horses in the middle of the stream and have therefore waited until the stream has been crossed and they themselves have been landed safely on the other side.
