LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 20.—The hour of meeting was fixed at 10:30 and the session was resumed.

Hamilton, of Maryland, argued in favor of expansion.

On motion of Anthony it was resolved that the committee on public printing be instructed to inquire into the number of bills, reports and public documents printed for the use of the Senate, and report what changes if any are necessary.

Wright offered an addition to the rules, which he asked to have printed and referred to the committee on rules, proposing that no debate shall be in order on a bill or or be pertinent to the subject before the Senate, and that a debate may be closed by a vote of yeas and after 24 hours notice. All bills shall be placed upon the calendar in their order, and shall be disposed of in each order unless postponed.

All special orders are prohibited unless by unanimous consent, and all postponed bills, unless otherwise ordered, go to the foot of the calendar.

Thurman objected and the resolution was over.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the Caldwell question.

Conkling, who was entitled to the floor, being absent, Hamilton of Md., expressed his views on the subject, arguing that the Senate could not go behind the election of Senator and inquire into the conduct and motives of the members composing the legislature. He could not vote to declare the seat of Caldwell vacant, but there was no doubt as to the power to expel a Senator who had been elected by the control of the legislature. He could not compromise with fraud, and while he sympathized with the person whom he was called to pass judgment, he could not escape condemning the act of the Senator from Kansas in the most solemn form.

Conkling, as a member of the Senate, would concentrate like burning focus, public attention on the lax and culpable agencies which tamper with elections, and that the States and Congress would severely punish bribery in that the man lied who charged me with having received two hundred dollars, or anything for any speech

I delivered in the late campaign.

Conkling rose to reply, when Schurz said, "I have the honor," and he continued, "I authorize the Senator from N. Y. also to call him a liar who, with regard to other stories, alleges anything not in accordance with the statement on this floor in January, 1872."

Conkling thanked the Senator for his direct and luminous answer.

He replied that he thought it would be still more luminous in a little while. He then proceeded to read from his remarks as printed in the Congressional Globe, January 8th, 1872, explanatory of his course during the different campaigns.

Conkling said he made no allusion to the Senator from Mo., in his speech, although he had said that in many cases money had been paid him for making political speeches. What he said in his speech was introduced as an argument and was just and fair, but the Senator from Mo., who had said what he, Conkling, had not seen, told him that he had traveled out of his way to accuse him of grossly improper remarks, at one point in the observations of the Senator from Mo., who had said that he should never be suspected that he had alluded to the Senator from Mo.

Schurz said he was glad to take an explanation such as was given, but was sorry to remark that the allusion had been made with such particulars it could not be mistaken.

He was sure that he had given the Senator from Mo. no cause for personal unkindness. As to the allusion to a prominent R. R. Co., in connection with the name of the Senator which had appeared in the newspapers, it would not have been denied the allegation in the strongest language he could command. If the Senator said that he made no allusion in his speech to him, Schurz, very well, let it go.

Conkling said the Senator from Missouri evidently wanted the last word, but said the expense of producing an unfriendly feeling in him. He differed from the Senator who said he did not wish to produce an unfriendly feeling in him. Last session he, Conkling, received from the Senator from Missouri, in connection with his accusations, false in fact, which the Senator from Missouri had no right to repeat.

Schurz replied that it seemed to him that the Senator from New York wanted the last word, otherwise he would not have risen again.

He had no reason to retract a single word, but would repeat that he thought that after the long time that had elapsed since the bill was passed, the Senator from New York had treated the remark he had made in allusion to him in his speech.

Had the Senator from New York done so, he, Schurz, would have put the matter in its right light himself.

Cameron rose to speak, but yielded for an executive session, and after some time spent therein the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, at half-past ten.
