Some Had No Representatives Present
—Thomas Hull Urges Systematic And Discriminate Reading.

At the general annual conference of the Y. M. M. I. association officers, which convened this morning at 10 o'clock in Barratt hall, the principal theme discussed was the courses of study being prepared for the coming year, and the importance of selecting and reading proper literature.

Dr. George H. Brimhall was the first speaker, his subject being "The Senior Manual." The work for next year's manual, said the speaker, is the development of the physical man, and will take up this subject in its various phases, and aim to show that the man who obeys the laws of his physical as well as spiritual being is the best man. "A man in the Church may be a better man than one outside," Dr. Brimhall entered into a detailed explanation of a sample lesson on the development of the social man, under the title, "The Interdependence of Man." Principles are made as concrete as possible, to bring them within the grasp of the student. As an example, this question is asked: "Why did you buy that particular kind of hat?" An answer to that question must make the young man think and impress him with the truth that man is very much dependent on others around him. Douglas M. Todd spoke on the junior manual. Next year's manual, he announced, will follow the trend of last year's work, being brief biographies of leading men in the Church. This study of the character of good men has proved a success among the boys of the Mutual; 10,000 copies of last year's manual were sold. Important events of Church history will be woven into the stories of the men, as will also the main historical events of the country. Elder Todd urged the necessity of the men who are to be the teachers of the Manual to qualify themselves by reading up on historical subjects.

READING COURSE.
The "reading course" was treated by Elder Joseph W. McMurrin. He announced that the general board had adopted for reading by the Mutual improvement members during the coming year the following list of books:

For the seniors: "Ancient America," by Baldione; "The Crisis," by Churchill; "Our Inland Sea," by Lambourne; "Courage," by Wagner; For the juniors: "The Castle Builder," by Nephel Anderson; "John Stevens' Courtship," by Nephel Anderson; "Life of Lincoln," by Hapgood. Elder McMurrin briefly reviewed these works. He then gave some figures to show that in the past not enough interest has been taken in this matter of reading. Elder McMurrin spoke emphatically on the importance of reading proper books, showing that the study of the Bible is the most important of all, and the elevating influence exerted by good books. To us no reading course is complete without the word of God. No book in the world equals the Bible as a store of divine wisdom, and we have other volumes of modern scriptures that are equally as important to the Latter-day Saints.

In the discussion which followed, Thomas Hull emphasized the need of systematic and discriminate reading. On the calling of the roll of stakes considerable amusement was created when it was learned that some of the Salt Lake stakes had no representatives present.

LOGAN VISITED BY THIEVES.

The perpetrators are still at large.

DESPONDENT WIDOW SAVED FROM SUICIDE

Mrs. Minnie Huston Tries to Follow
Her Husband to the Grave.

In the despair of grief over the death of her husband, Mrs. Minnie Huston last night sought to follow him by taking morphine. She was prevented from this by the heroic efforts of the police, continuing through a period of over 12 hours, of Asst. City Physician F. B. Steele and members of the police department.

The attempted suicide was discovered close to midnight last night, when friends of the woman, uneasy over her long absence during the evening went to her rooms, those occupied by her deceased husband and herself at Vick's place, 56 Orpheum avenue, and found her lying unconscious. The police were notified and Dr. Steele was promptly summoned. She was found to be under the influence of such an amount of morphine as to warrant the theory of attempted suicide.

Throughout the night and the forenoon the work of resuscitation was kept up, but it was not until towards noon, just after the woman had been taken to the emergency hospital, that it was considered that she was out of danger. She is now in the care of Matron Gifford and will recover.

The motive for the attempted suicide is attributed to grief following the death of her husband. The husband, Frank Huston, employed as a waiter at the Vienna cafe, died suddenly while preparing to take a bath. After arising in the morning and chatting cheerfully with his wife, he went to the bathroom. Becoming alarmed at his long absence, Mrs. Huston went to the bathroom to find her husband lying dead in the bathtub.

Since that moment, despite the ministrations of her friends, she has been in a hysterical, despondent mood, passing sleepless nights bewailing her grief. Late yesterday afternoon she left her room and at that time, evidently, secured the drug which she had chosen to end her misery.

She retired to her room early and it was not until late that friends in the house after wondering over her absence sought her at the room.

STATE DOES NEED BIGGER QUARTERS

Governor William Spry Declares
That Proposed Capitol Building is Imperative.

LIGHT ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Proportionately Salt Lake County Receives Smallest Amount of the Funds of the State.

"Thus far, practically the only public opposition raised to the proposition for the erection of the capitol building," said Gov. William Spry this morning, "is that based upon the claim that the carrying of the proposed special election would give to Salt Lake county an undue proportion of the appropriations and public buildings of the state. No stretch of the imagination can make such an argument plausible. As a matter of fact the effort being made to create a sentiment or the removal of the capitol of the state is irrelevant. The constitution has already fixed Salt Lake City as the permanent location of the seat of government, and the state of Utah has proceeded, under the terms of the land grant, which carried with it the express provision that the grant should become available when the state did fix a capital location permanently, to select the lands granted under the enabling act. There is an open question whether the state would not jeopardize its land grant for capital building purposes were an effort made to transfer the seat of government at this time."

WHAT SALT LAKE GETS.

"Proportionately, Salt Lake county receives a smaller amount of the funds of the state for the maintenance of state institutions than any other county having state institutions in the state. Proportionately Salt Lake county pays a larger amount of the taxes of the state than any other county in the state. The claim is also made that in order to secure a capitol building for Salt Lake county, the appropriations made by the recent legislature for roads and bridges were voted by the governor. It is true that the governor vetoed a number of road appropriations from the general appropriation bill, but it is also a fact that under the provisions of the special road bills passed by the last legislature, which received the approval of the governor, a larger amount was made available for the roads of the state than at any previous session of the legislature. Two years ago, the legislature appropriated the sum of $33,500 for the roads of the various counties, and $25,000 for bridges. This year the roads of the state were given $55,000, and the bridges $40,000. In other words, the roads and bridges of the state fare better in the sum of $42,500 at the hands of the legislature and governor during 1909 than they did during the years 1907 and 1908."

QUARTERS NEEDED.

"The rapid growth of the business transacted by the state makes it imperative that additional quarters be provided for its proper maintenance. Every branch of state government there is a crying need for better accommodations. Utah is one of but two or three states in the Union that has failed to provide a capitol building for the housing of the state officers. The Utah legislature, however, while the state plays the role of tenant to Salt Lake City and county, at a very large yearly rental. The time is opportune for the passage of a measure to provide funds for the purpose of erecting a state capitol, since the legislature has passed three measures, which will provide for a one mill levy, will accomplish the desired end at a minimum expense to the people, distributed over a period of 15 years."

POLICE DEPARTMENT SENDS VAGS TO WORK

Eleven Men Rounded Up at Short Line Got a Rude Shock in Police Court.

The employment agency sign is, figuratively, tacked up over the entrance to 120 east First South. Judge J. M. Bowman is the manager of the agency, and has as his assistants in securing laborers the entire police department.

It's somewhat of an innovation—the conversion of the police court into a labor exchange, but there is a hopeful feeling for the success of the scheme. Hereafter the vagrants will be given excuse being on his way to some other town in search of work has been given the chance of going—but now the chance will be provided for him, and he won't need to go out of town.

The new idea was developed today in the case of 11 men. The 11, all husky enough to make a grocer's team were caught using the Short Line yards for sleeping quarters last night. In court this morning, in parrot-like repetition, they told how they were all willing, and even anxious to go to work. There's where they got fooled, for Judge Bowman had a job for them. After listening to their declarations that they would seek work, he told them that he had a job for them. They were to report to Pat Moran's foreman in charge of the work on Main street. They would be given work on Monday they must all report to the court that they are at work.

The idea of finding employment for the vagrants who want to work is something new in police circles. They were all willing, and even anxious to go to work. "You know," said Judge Bowman after court this morning, "just because a man is arrested as a vagrant, he may not be a bad man. He may be sincere in wanting to go to work, and he may be unfortunate in just not finding it. It isn't right to send a man like that to jail or to make him leave town. This morning I had a talk with P. J. Moran and he said he wanted all the men he could get, that all they had to do was to go to the foreman and they would be given work. They would be an experiment, but it's worth trying, so those men who want to go to work will be given a chance. If they make good, there is nothing against them if they don't, why, they will be sent."

Under Judge Bowman's plan the man arrested for vagrancy who expresses his willingness to work will be provided with a job. If he doesn't take the job, it will either be the rockpile or leave town for him.

WATERS RUN DEEP ON CANYON ROAD

Along City Creek from Third avenue north, the stream was higher today than it has been in many years. Early in the day the waters were over the banks and tearing away at the banks in a manner that threatens trouble. In the past few years this part of the stream has caused more or less trouble on account of the wearing away of the banks. In order to stop this a large number of sacks of sand were laid along the water course. The water is now running over these banks and back the water in the canyon road bridge there is some water running over the bridge.

The covered aqueduct which takes the water from the creek through to Main street has thus far been able to handle the stream. A close watch is being made of this place for fear that the place might become clogged and back the water in the canyon road. Late this afternoon the waters were raising so rapidly that Chief of Police Barlow and as many of the patrolmen as could be spared were sent to the scene to lend assistance in any way possible. The men went armed with shovels and boots prepared to dig out the water in the canyon road as possible. Residents in the vicinity have become greatly excited over conditions and several have gone as far as to move their homes from the stream threaten further damage.

EASTERN SCHOOLS.

Mrs. Susan Young Gates Writes Regarding Her Investigations.

Mrs. Susan Young Gates who is visiting the leading educational institutions of the east, looking over the field of interests of the Agricultural college at Logan, writes of her experiences as follows:

Mrs. McCune and myself have spent nine strenuous days, traveling over 2,000 miles, visiting five great schools, one in Lincoln, two in Evanston and two in Chicago, with several hours' rest in between. The governmental experiments carried on in the agricultural department at Washington. We found very much to praise and more to learn from these splendid schools. Manual or industrial education is surely the coming educational force. Even the ordinary public schools are fitted with the most elaborate and expensive departments for the primary shop and laboratory work.

The ideal school is, so far, the Central school of Evanston, Ill., of which the locally famous Principal Nichols is the head. To enter the dim halls of a high school and find the winged Victory in coronal size, shining out in the half-lights of the broad entrance, with exquisite scenes in the best American impressionist schools flaming up and down the corridors, gives one a very pleasant shock. The office of the principal himself is a fine example of what light, pictures, growing plants, fine patings and Crayon furniture can do for the usual prosy and otherwise dull interior.

The small but model domestic science department in this school is our ideal of such a place. With white and blue tiled walls, in imitation, white and blue linoleum on the floor, the white enamel cabinets, the white enamel tables, the central laboratory tables, also tiled, with their small individual equipment of gas jet and Crayon, the furniture can do for the usual prosy and otherwise dull interior.

There are a number of other schools to visit, but the car strike in Philadelphia is holding me quiet with my missionary son in Camden.

TONIC SELLER'S PLIGHT.

Annie Mack, who earned $5 a day selling a hair tonic, filed suit to recover $20,000 from the Utah Light & Railway company for personal injuries sustained in an accident at Third South and Third East street on Oct. 14, 1908. It is alleged that she was struck by a streetcar which crossed the intersection at 25 miles an hour. She was hurled 50 feet and sustained permanent injury to her eyes, and lost most of her teeth.

BIG GATHERING OF YOUNG LADIES

Second Session of Mutual Conference is Marked by a Large Attendance.

INTERESTING ADDRESSES.

Mrs. Mattie Horne Tingey, Mrs. Augusta Grant, Mrs. Eardley and Mrs. Lovejoy Among Speakers.

The Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement association met in conference with three sessions beginning yesterday afternoon in the Fourteenth ward assembly hall and continuing this morning and this afternoon at the Assembly hall. Yesterday's was an officers' program and was devoted to the subjects of department meetings, traveling library and secretaries and treasurers' reports, and many interesting topics were discussed.

At Assembly this morning a splendid gathering was present, eliciting the compliments and congratulations of the presiding officers, the presidents, Mrs. Mattie Horne Tingey, and her counselors, Mrs. Ruth M. Fox, and Mrs. Mae T. Nyström, with the board of directors of the general society. In the session opened with singing and prayer, and Mrs. Nyström on behalf of the president welcomed the representatives in a few sincere words of greeting. She was followed by Mrs. Mattie Horne Tingey, who spoke upon the subject of testimonies, and said that reports varied materially from different sources as to their success. Said that they should always be successful and would be so if conducted and participated in with the right spirit. They should be careful preparation for these meetings. Parents should be consulted and asked for testimonies in their lives. The faith praying should be read, and everything considered that might help them the spirit and gift of testimony. "Knowledge is power," quoted Mrs. Tingey, and to know God and His Son Jesus Christ, is life eternal. How important then that we should seek after so great a gift. This is done by seeking knowledge of the Gospel as believed by the Latter-day Saints.

She was followed by Mrs. Emily C. Adams, who gave the outline of the coming lessons for the associations, chiefly dealing with the apostasy of the early Christians from the first Church as established by Christ and His apostles. This she said led directly to the restoration of the gospel as believed in by the Latter-day Saints, and lessons upon the subject were prepared by the best authorities.

MRS. GRANT ON "THE HOME."

Mrs. Augusta Grant spoke upon the home as it related to the senior course giving interesting examples of homes in which art, order and cleanliness were obtained even though there was no great wealth. Said that new and costly things were not necessarily artistic. The home should be considered first as a place in which to live in a way of convenience, sanitation and general cleanliness, religion should be a chief consideration in the home, and family prayer an important consideration especially in the way of early training. It gave confidence where otherwise there might be embarrassment. In traveling about she stated she had been impressed with the improvement in cooking and serving meals in the many homes, due, she believed, to the increasing interest in domestic science and the lessons learned at the M. I. associations. She spoke of the interest in the Journal also and spoke especially of the Pocahontas stake where of the 35 families all subscribed for the Journal. Mrs. E. B. Edwards spoke of the home lessons as applied to seniors, and began with an example of two young girls left in charge of a large family each in her turn at 14 years of age taking the responsibility and carrying it with courage and painstaking, which showed evidence of the attention to details. She spoke of the common but important details of the home, and said that they had a vital relation to health and cleanliness. She then referred to a past article in the Young Woman's Journal, "Death in the Dishcloth," and said that study of those minor details was essential. She also quoted Miss Van Cott of the university as saying that an eastern professor who had visited the domestic science departments of nearly all the big eastern colleges, had told her the university had the best of them all. This showed the interest as well as fine facility enjoyed by Utah students.

Mrs. Edith Rossiter Lovejoy gave the general outline of literature for the year, mentioning the books that would be taken up, among them the work of two home authors, Lambourne and "The" and the poems of Eliza R. Snow.

Mrs. Ethel Rich Carlquist of Plover, stake and Nellie Schofield of Utah stake association gave excellent hints on presenting lessons in the meetings, the first being for her topic the lessons for seniors and the second those for juniors. The interesting meeting closed with singing and benediction.

This afternoon's session includes: Singing; by the congregation; prayer; reading of annual report; remarks; Chorister: Anna Hood, of Star Valley; singing; congregation; benediction.

TROUSERS WERE HIS UNDOING.

Joe Valdez was arrested by Patrolman Emil Johnson this afternoon while he was trying to take a pair of trousers from Nadel's East Second and South street clothing store. At the time of his arrest Valdez had a package under his arm, the package containing three ladies' silk waists and a negligee shirt. The police believe this to have been taken also, and are making an investigation this afternoon.
