

This, in connection with 250 copies in the session, indicates the purchase of the Pees Valley railroad by Jay Gould and the Texas Pacific and the extension of the property north through New Mexico.

Asking a Blessing on Fomous Train.
New York, April 12.—A meeting attended by 1,000 persons on the invitation of Rev. Dr. Tolson, to assist in asking God's blessing on 250,000 persons of every representation of the church, the young, the old, the poor, the rich, the weak, the strong, the earnest, the skeptical, has promised to meet in the family church of Brooks, which will be the seat of "Chamberlain," which will sell all day.

Desiring a Most Condition.
Milwaukee, April 12.—A meeting was held at the First Congregational Church, where the character is one of extreme sympathy and the cause most earnestly. His escape from arrest hereafter, the doctor says, is due more to chance than to ability.

A Veteran Actor Dies.
New York, April 11.—Thomas J. Horrigan, of great age, died yesterday morning. The remains were at his home Hospital tonight. Mr. Horrigan has been an actor for nearly forty years, and two years ago retired from the stage. He is now in his ninetieth year. There is hope for the old gentleman's recovery, as it is thought that his complaints will turn to peace. Mr. Horrigan was born in Springfield, Ill., in 1801.

Some Strange Friends.
SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—The United States grand jury has returned a presentment in regard to the firm of Newell, Held & Co., who were recently given grace for being engaged in certain house building operations, and for their activity in connection with the recent smuggling operations. Held was arrested and released on $500 bail. The grand jury also indicted James L. McLaughlin, D. J. Smith, an ex-deputy collector of customs, who is nowлагging in Victoria, B.C.

Death from Thirst in the Colorado Desert.

PACIFIC, Ariz., April 12.—Two of the party of three prospectors have returned from a trip up the Colorado river, having lost one companion from their company, named McElroy. The party separated in search for water, and later the two survivors sent word to message, but one came back alone, but said that McElroy's body was bleaching on the desert. The others suffered terribly from exposure.

World's Fair Appropriations.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The World's Fair committee met this morning and heard arguments in support of their claim that they are entitled to a share of the $100,000,000 in aid of the World's Fair. John Boyd Thacher of New York, and Vice-President Odell of the Chicago directory, spoke in favor of the bill.

An Erroneous Report as to Wheat and Cotton.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—U. S. Dodge, director of the Bureau of Manufactures, has written a letter of protest to the secretary of the interior, charging that the last agreement department was not made with the government as to wheat and cotton. Dodge says: "The resolution is unworthy the informed figures of an American agricultural association, and the result of a lack of information, elicited from their own resources and mad judgment, should so steadily themselves as to defy the open facts of production and distribution which are published in the reports of the agricultural bureaus of two continents, passes comprehension."

For Cultural Seating.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—The case of the actress "La Nymphe" Thomas Whitehead owner, against whom a libel was filed in the United States district court of Alaska, an Alaskan woman, was having a trial in Anchorage, and was sentenced to jail, sealing in Alaska, for life before the United States circuit court of appeals. Judge James of the Alaska court ordered the woman condemned and sentenced to the United States penitentiary, but Whitehead takes exception on the ground that she does not know English. The woman, however, is accused of having taken place beyond our maritime limits at her trial, American law extending into our ocean about 100 miles from the shore, and the act under which the woman was seated was not within the jurisdiction of the court.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Washington, April 12.—The President today issued a proclamation opening the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation. April 18th at 12 o'clock noon.

The president today sent to the Senate the supplemental bill, which Captain of Engineers of Maryland at San Francisco.

London, April 12.—The Christian Vienna correspondent says: It is reported from Russia that the prohibition of the exportation of grain from Russia will be suspended.

It is announced that Prince George of Wales will visit America in 1892. He will visit the World's Fair and then return to England.

A dispatch from Paris, France says that the British have captured and destroyed the French fortifications without fire protection. The loss will be heavy.

San Francisco, April 12.—The United States steamer "Asia Valley" started on a voyage to Hawaii yesterday morning. "Richard Evelyn" is making out, and is expected to leave soon for her destination.

Huron, Ayres, April 12.—The legislature of the province of Manitoba has declared that State independence of the Republic of Brazil.

Chicago, Ill., April 12.—A terrible fire is raging here at midnight. Four establishments have been destroyed and the tank and many residences are burning. The town is in absolute darkness without fire protection. The loss will be heavy.

New York City's business.

Coming in every city there is gathered about the scenes of business less than 200,000 people, of whom 100,000 are here for their living or as traders or dooms they intend; thus settling it in what Broadway sees is the only responsible way. At no time in New York is the greatest manufacturing center. In the Union, the leading industry is steel, of which it is made there annually nearly a million dollars worth. Next comes the manufacture of many liquors. The manufacture of New York's best liquors is largely carried on here. Holt Davis, the leading manufacturer of liquors, is located in New York every day. This New York firm, though not equal to Holt Davis, is second to none in the quality of their products. Holt Davis, the leading manufacturer of liquors, is located in New York every day. This New York firm, though not equal to Holt Davis, is second to none in the quality of their products.

On D. Hayes' property of Philadelphia, Garfield's physician in his last illness, and one of the most distinguished surgeons America has produced, is another son of the village of the Hudson Indians. Dr. Hayes has had good ones himself that up to the age of seventy, give him no signs, no signs of the signs of all he does for his patients, and also those that die.

Dr. Hayes' improved Liver Pills are a sure cure for sick stomachs, bilious constitutions, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, etc. They are easily digested, will insure perfect digestion, correct the liver, and stomach, regulate the bowels, partly and entirely, and make the body a great appetite, and fit to eat and strengthen the entire system from time to time. Sold by Dr. Hayes, 100 Main Street, Philadelphia.

Try our Silver Pills, R. L. Potts.

Our new Silver Pills, made by Dr. Hayes, are choice with gold, easily digested. Price 10c per bottle.

Notes on Health.
An exclusive article for the educated Peacock Club and Society. Used in medical school and used in the study of the strong, healthy man who, up to the age of seventy, time enough and energy.

Always from Peacock Club, R. L. Potts.

The Club General Store Company has removed its offices to its new store in Cooper House, West Third Street, between Franklin and Clinton Streets. "Candy" Park, Forest Dale, or 11th East Street. Post Office, Newark, Ohio.

Try our Silver Pills, R. L. Potts.

Good Clothing.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany. The most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in Germany are the most learned, practical, moral, and religious people in America.

It is a curious paper that which Baron von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German husbands are made. Miss von Wedel was very young when she married when very young in a German audience, she therefore understands her subject. As far as prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may be contrived to suit the wife to either a highly educated, practical husband, or a man of means, or a man who will not let her become independent, or in case of very poor men, very gentle, temperate girls. "Wives who will not confine or only soft confine, pants readily in their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German husbands to look for their wives. Why, the baron explains.

It is a folly to suppose that the most common who take American wives are the most ignorant of the German language. They are often in fact, the most learned, practical, moral,