

NOTES FOR THE LADIES.

A raffle for a kit of burglar's tools netted $85 to a Chicago widow.

A Trenton woman dreamed of being surrounded by hissing snakes, and she struck out with such force as to break her arm against the wall.

In a breach of promise case at Fort Wayne the lover was convicted of writing "mi hart beets oanley for the, my darling hiney."

How is this for a French description of a young lady? "She leaves off kissing at twelve, and begins again at twenty."

"I hate to die—I wanted to wear my blue redingote to Mrs. George's party," were the dying words of the belle of Kansas City.

A Vermont man went over to an island to live as Robinson Crusoe did, but his wife followed with a club, and his solitary life lasted only three hours.

A veteran observer says that a little baby is an easy thing to love, but a big baby is a hard thing to love, especially if you have to marry her—or him.

A Western editor has placed over his marriage heading a cut representing a large trap sprung, with the motto, "the trap down; another nunny caught."

A young girl in Troy, who became exasperated with her family, took her revenge by stealing a shawl, that she might bring them into disgrace. She was sent to jail for ten days.

Two handsome young ladies having commenced practice as physicians in Blackhawk county, Ill., it is stated that sickness has broken out among the young men of that place to an alarming extent.

"Madam," said a certain nameless one to Mrs. Brown the other day, "you are talking simple rubbish." "Yes, sir," replied the ever-crushing lady, "because I wish you to comprehend me."

Man power is so scarce in North Charleston, N. H., that a bevy of ladies in view of the situation, turned out one day lately and cleared the stones from one of the principal streets.

An old widow named Catherine Geiger, living near Milford, Kosciusko county, Ind., in crossing a field to go from her residence to a neighbor's house, was attacked by a ram and butted to death.

"I declare, mothersaid," a pretty little girl in a pretty little way, "'tis too bad! You always send me to bed when I am not sleepy, and you always make me get up when I am sleepy!"

Perhaps it was not amusing to see Joblin the other night singing contentedly to himself, and crumbling bread into a bowl of starch which his wife had placed in the pantry, and saying there was nothing like bread and milk, after all.

Five out of nine of the leading business houses in Manchester, Iowa, are managed by ladies, and managed well, too. The name of the town should be changed to Womanchester, out of compliment to the ladies.

A clergyman once, when reading the burial service, came to the place where he must say, "Our deceased brother (or sister)." He did not know which; so, turning to a mourner, he asked whether it was a "brother" or a "sister." The mourner innocently said, "No relation at all, sir—only an acquaintance."

A Germantowner, who had tarried late at a wine supper, found his wife waiting his return, in a high state of nervousness. Said she—"Here I've been waiting and rocking in the chair till my head spins round like a top!" "Jess so, wife, where I've been," responded he. "It's in the atmosphere!"

In Worcester, Mass., according to the Gazette, Miss Nellie Barnard appeared at the polls and demanded a right to cast a ballot. This request was denied her, she only being allowed to vote in the box receiving contributions for the Memphis sufferers. In this box, she was informed she could vote early and often.

The Davenport Democrat says in a fit of perverseness: The good ladies of Des Moines have a Dress Reform Society. They gather together weekly, and talk up fashion foibles, read original stories, essays, and have good times. The tale of "The Missing Door-Plate; or, Our Mary Ann's Belt Buckle," will be read at the next gathering—of course.

A newly-married couple found themselves in a railway carriage with only one fellow passenger, who appeared to sleep profoundly. Soon the lady commenced to call her young husband all the endearing names that natural history could supply. The traveler, roused up, begged the lady to call her partner a "Noah's Ark" at once, and allow him to sleep quietly.

A strange episode occurred recently at the Church Congress at Bath. During the discussion on the Rev. E. Garbett's paper on "The Life of Godliness," Archdeacon Emery, the Permanent Secretary arose and stated that "some one in the garb of a clergyman was yesterday found in that hall with his hand in the pocket of a lady." He "feared that there must be some ungodly person there." The lady coincided with this depressing view of the subject.

The Boston Transcript says that there was quite an exciting time at one of the Pittsfield factories the other day. A girl employed there went out for a few minutes, and on her return had some words with the superintendent, who was displeased at her leaving her work. He then cruelly struck her, as the story is told, bruising her face with his fist, and afterwards cutting and wounding her on the back and shoulders with a stick. A plucky female operative took up the quarrel in behalf of the girl, and blacked the superintendent's eyes, cut his lip, and thrashed him pretty soundly. The affair is to come before the district court.

An average of one gin house peil day is burned in Georgia by incendiaries.

Goshen, Indiana, has a steam cider mill which chews up 1,000 bushels of apples per day.

The greatest travel of modern times must be the barber, for he is continually going from poll to poll.

Late in the autumn or during the winter is said to be the best time for painting the exteriors of buildings.

A child was scared to death last week by the clamor of the fiery, untamed hackmen at the steamboat landing in Detroit.

Plimsoll, the British member of Parliament who has denounced the fraudulent sinking of ships, spent $15,000 defending himself in two actions.

Of the five prima donnas in Italian opera in the world, Adeline Patti, Luca, Nilsson, Ilma di Murski and Tietjens, three are in the United States.

An intelligent voter in Burlington, Iowa, in scratching the name of Mrs. Hagar, wrote upon his ballot, "Boant want no wommun in Mine."

It may seem impossible that there should be, in the great metropolis of a nation like ours, such things as bread riots, yet this is precisely the danger now threatened.

The Pope, says the Boston Transcript, is indebted to the Emperor of Germany for some very plain, intelligible talk on a subject on which he needs enlightenment.

A New York chemist claims to be able to reduce boot-legs to beef-steaks. This sort of thing has been in successful operation at the average boarding-house for many years.

During a sermon in the chapel of the Georgia State Prison, 520 convicts struck up "We'll all drink stone blind," and had to be marched down stairs. They didn't like the chaplain.

The managers of the Colchester (England) Young Men's Christian Association have decided that Mark Twain's books are not fit to be read by Colchester young Christians, and banished them from the library.

Queen Victoria has received from the Thirteenth Hussars a celebrated horse twenty-seven years old, and one of the few remaining horses that took part in the famous charge of Balaklava. The animal will be kept in London at the Queen's stables.

There is said to be a can of nitroglycerine buried in the Capital Square at Raleigh, N. C., where it was secreted just before the surrender, but the exact place of concealment has been lost, and no one dare dig for it, as a blow of the pick might send the digger skyward.

A member of the "Woman's Congress" in New York said in a speech the other day that "it is not the business of every married couple to have children." No, it is not exactly their business, but it is mighty hard to make them think it isn't.

Two young ladies of Forest Grove went on a visit to Coos Bay, Oregon, recently. While there both of them became engaged and have got married. Now all the Forest Grove girls are begging their parents to let them go to Coos Bay.

It is said that the bronze statue of Jefferson, which has stood before the White House for the last quarter of a century, has been removed, and there is no reasonable solution to this strange and uncalled for proceeding, excepting that as a model of temperance, justice, economy and wisdom, it is no longer a companionable object—a monument of faded glory, and a rebuke upon present corruption, incompetence and dishonest management. —Dubuque Herald.

The bishop of Chester, in a published letter, comes out strongly against the use of confession in the Anglican Church. Of course the bishop opposes it. Confession would hurt a good many bishops.

It was the off-year, and the financial panic, and Credit Mobilier, and the salary grab, and because the farmers were busy getting in their crops. But if the democrats think they did it, they are badly fooled—that's all!—Ex.

A correspondent says he detected the leader of a disreputable clique at Niblo's Garden, and hissed to stop the noise, and then remonstrated with the leader, who threatened him, and had him watched. Correspondent complained at the box office, and was informed that any person hissing in that theatre would be likely to have his "snoot busted."

Professor Hitchcock, of Amherst College, explored Miles' cave, in Salisbury, recently, with a guide. Hundreds of feet below the surface their torches were suddenly extinguished, and there were no means of relighting them or retracing their way. For six hours they remained there, the Professor singing hymns and repeating the Lord's prayer in all the languages he knew. Finally relief came. The Professor fainted on emerging. —Hartford Times.
