KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister.

READ PROOF BELOW from

Rev. P. N. GRANGER,

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20th, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a spavin had formed. I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.

Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavin, ringbone, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all contingencies of the joints or limbs, or thoroughpins, to obtain cure for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Any Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.

"Just Like a Man."

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

"They do beat all!" sighed Mrs. Peck, as she wiped her face earnestly with a spotted cotton handkerchief, and set her spectacles aloft on top of her cap border. "I summered an' wintered one of 'em nigh on to fifty years, and the' was things he done't I don't see into up to this day. Besides, I had sons, and darters' husbands as well, and they're all of a piece; tarred with the same stick, as Lisa used to say."

"Well," spoke up Miss Patty Brinkly, a vivacious maiden lady, stopping to thread her needle, with both elbows on the quilt frame and her thread and needle stabbing at each other nearly half a yard away from her straining eyes. "I hain't never had no such experience, thanks be to praise! Pa used to say if I had ha' married anybody I'd have killed 'em or ran away from 'em, and I dono but what I should."

"They had something to be thankful for, then, as well as thee, Patty," dryly remarked Aunt Marcia Blinn, the only lady of the "Friends" persuasion, as she called it, of whom Oakley boasted.

"Well, they're queer anyhow," resumed the Widow Peck. "There's no 'counting for 'em; they'll up and do things you wouldn't no more expect of 'em than anything; and as for bein' protectors for women folks and all that, which folks tell about in books, my land! Lias Peck would ha' died more'n forty times if I had'nt ha' had dry things for to put onto him when he came in soakin' wet out of the crick, or after a pourin' rain. As 'twas, he died o' rheumatiz't he took along o' floating saw-logs down to the mill in a spring freshet and never coming home to dinner, but working all day in them damp clothes. I gave him pokeberry rum, an' a hemlock sweat, and two hull bottles of Gumption's Ginger Bitters, besides a rubbin' of him powerful with camphire, before I sent for the doctor; but it stuck to his stomick and he went off like a snuff. But that ain't here nor there; as I was a sayin', for nigh onto fifty years I'd put his flannel shirts into the front left hand corner of the bottom drawer in the m'hog'ny bureau in the bed-room, and every Sunday mornin' reg'lar, when he was cleanin' up for the meetin' he'd holler out 'Lurancy! them flannel shirts o' mine?' Now that's so!" concluded the disconsolate widow, wiping her eyes, and adding in a stage aside—"But I'd give considerable to hear him holler that again!"

"And they hain't got no memory," put in Miss Patty, who had at last coaxed needle and thread to an amicable understanding, and was quilting away with zeal and discretion, as every good quilter knows how. "I never see the time when they wouldn't forget things. I've tailored round quite a number o' years, and I've had an eye on 'em, as you say. There was Silas Buck, I used to tailor for his folks consider'ble; there was him and three boys and the hired man. Well, I'd get out o'linen thread, say, and you can't no more make over sauls with sewin' cotton then you can with spider webs, and Mis' Buck she'd say, 'Silas,' says she, 'Patty's all out o'linen thread. When ye go down to the store after them rake-tails I wish't you'd fetch up a hank o'black and a hank o' brown—now don't ye forget it!' And Silas he'd laugh, he was just as clever as a basket o'chips, and he'd say' 'I'll fetch it mother;' but he wouldn't! 'nd I set an' set a waitin' for't, and fin'lly put on my bonet and walk a mile down to the Corners for to fetch it my self; then he'd say, 'Cousin Patty'—you see we called cousins because his father's second wife was sister to my Aunt Sophrony's husband—'Cousin Patty, hain't you got them overhauls done yet?" and I'd sorter bluster 'nd say, 'Cousin Silas, I ain't no more able to make bricks without straw'n the Isr'elites was for Pharo', and you didn't fetch me no thread yesterday!' and then he'd haw, haw, right out, he was real clever, but land! so shiftless. That's just a case in p'int, so to speak, ye know; just one time, you can tell by a little what a great deal means, and, as Miss Peck says, they's all alike."

"Thee doesn't think women folks are perfect; does thee, Patty?" queried Marcia, in her calm voice.

"Wel', I dono as they be; I dono as I said they be, but you can generally tell where most of 'em 'll fetch up, an you are kinder fit and prepared for what they will do, and especially for what they won't do. Sometimes they'll disapp'int all your calculation, but then you can fall back on Scripter, and see't they was made to be the weaker sect; though, if 'tain't really lawful to say so, I own I always did have as poor opinion of Adam as ever was; to be tellin' how 'twas Eve made him eat the apple, when he done it the first time askin', but 'twas just like a man! They keep a doing of it to this day, it's forever an' always 'the woman tempted me.'"

"Thee remembers, dosen't thee? the Scriptures says, 'the woman being deceived was in the transgression.' It hath always seemed to me kindly in Timothy so to speak of her as to lay the blame on the enemy."

"That ain't neither here nor there," answered the logical and undaunted Patty. 'I ain't tryin' to mak light of Eve's disobeyin,' but I do say Adam was real mean to get behind her; he was able to say he wouldn't, I guess, just as well as she was, but he didn' no morn'n she did. I was a readin' somewhere, t'other day, about an old French feller, a Judge or somethin' Judge of a P'lice Court, I expect by the tell, and whensomeever they fetched a man before him that had been took up for a misdeed, no matter what 'twas, he always asked, 'Who is she?' 'Lettin' on as though a woman was to the bottom of every wrong-doin.' Clear Adam! And that's what I fault 'em for."

"Well, they be queer," Mrs. Peck again took up the fruitful theme. "Sary, what was that you was telling about Thomas an' them letter t'other night?"

"Oh, me!" said Sarah Beers deprecatingly, but with a laugh that lit her pale face and sad eyes; for Sarah was a typical New England woman; careful and troubled about everything; a coward physically, a heroine mentally; afraid of her very shadow, but doing the bravest things, with her heart sinking and her joints trembling all the time, because duty or affection called her to such service. She married Tom Beers, a bright, strong fellow full of fun and reckless daring, and devoted to Sarah, but entirely ignorant of her daily anxieties and terrors, for she was as reticent as she was timid; if she thought she could save any one—much more anyone she loved—by such reticence.

"Oh, tell on't, Sary; 'tain't no harm; we all know Tom sets by ye like his life. He wouldn't do nothin' to plague ye, if he knowed it, no mor'n he'd cut his head off; but that letter business was so exactly like men folks."

A chorus of voices echoed the request. There were only about ten people at the quilting—it was the regular sewing circle meeting of Oakley—so Sarah consented.

"Well; 'tain't much to tell, but if ina wants me to. You know Tom's horse is real young and kind of skittish, and if there is one thing above another I'm afeard of it's a horse."

"Bless your soul and body," put in her mother; "I never see the thing yet you wa'nt afeard of, Sary, horse or not."

"Oh, I know it, ma, but I am awfully afeard of a skittish horse; Tom, he don't really sense it, and he says Jenny ai'nt ugly, she's just full of play; and I s'pose she is; she's knowing as a dog, and I give her a bite of somethin' every time he fetches her 'round, and she knows me real well, but she will jump and lash out and shy sometimes, and it makes me just as weak as water, so't I don't never drive her ef I can help to."

"You don't mean to say you ever do drive a creetur when you feel that kind o' way toward it?" queried Miss Patty sharply.

"Why, I hev to sometimes, ye know; there's oft times a day Tom can't leave the havin' or harvestin' or plantin', or something, and there has to be things fetched from the store, and no way to get 'em except I go for 'em, so Tom he jist tackles up and I go for 'em; he don't really mistrust that I'm scared, and I don't never tell him that I be; what's the use?"

"Well," said Miss Patty, with a snuff no type can express, and Sarah went on:

"So week before last Aunt Simons writ and said she was comin' out to stay a day or two before she went back South, and she was goin' to fetch Joe, that's her oldest, along with her; she wanted for to have us meet her at the station, but she said she shouldn't come if it rained, she's got dreadful weak lungs; but she'd telegraph if she wan't coming. Well, Wednesday morning, the day she set to come, it did rain, sure enough, and seeing there was a donation party to get up, I sided my work away early and walked over to the Center, for I knew I should find all the folks I'd got to see to home. I'd just got ready to start for home about noon-time, and I bethought myself to step into the postoffice, for I knew there'd be a mail for the creamery, so I got a double handful of letters and papers and set my face toward home, when who should come up but Tom in the buggy.

"Get in," says he, "I'm going to the station."

"What for?" says I.

"Why," says he, "they hain't sent no telegraph, so they're coming."

"But it rains," says I, "and Aunt Simons said she would'nt come if it rained."

"Well," says he, "I obey orders and break owners; she said she'd telegraph if they wan't comin'; and how do you know but it didn't rain there?"

"So I got in and put the mail down into the seat, and he driv like Jehu, for we heerd the train whistle; and says I, "Oh, Tom! don't drive up the hill to the station, I'm afraid Jenny'll be scared."

"He laughed a little. 'I'll bet she wouldn't be half so scared as you,' says he; 'but I'll leave you to the foot of the hill, and, if they come, I'll holler down to you, and I'll get in and go up to t'other station and put 'em into the hack that waits there, for there can't four ride in this buggy; and you drive along up to that station, and then I'll put you into the hack with Aunt Simons, and I'll take Joe along o' me in the buggy.' So sayin' he jumped out for we was there, and run up just in time to catch the train. I didn't have a thought that they'd be there, but they was, and he called out, "They're here, drive along.' I knew 'twas the quickest way to take the road alongside the track, but the 'Tuck train was due, and Jen is skittish, but I thought I'd ought to, so I drove along; there wasn't no train, but right in the road, where I couldn't turn nor back, I see two loose hosses—and, if there is a thing that puts lightenin' into Jenny, it's loose hosses. I tell you the shivers ran down my back, but I knew the only chance was to go so fast she wouldn't think about side show.; so I jist lay the whip onto her, and she sprang to and went by them hosses quicker! Well, the hack was going over the bridge, but I catched up with it, and Joe he got out with Thomas and took the buggy, and I got in with aunt. Tom had got to go up street to get a can for the creamery. I called out to him as he went off:

"'Look out for your mail on the seat,' and we drove along. But we hadn't gone a half mile before Tom he came tearing along and stopped the hack.'

"'Where did you put the mail?' says he.

"'Why, on the seat of the buggy,' says I.

"'No you didn't!' Says he; there wasn't nothing there but papers.'

"'I guess I gave you the letters, then. I sort of thought I did,' says I.

"'Well I haven't 'em anyway,' says he. 'Look in all your pockets, Sally; they ain' in mine.' So I looked and looked, but I hadn't a letterr I knew I hadn't, but I looked to suit him. Then I thought how I drove by the side road, and I told him I guessed they'd jolt out of the buggy when I drove so fast.

"'Dear me!" says he, 'I must have those letters to-day. I've got to; I'll go back over the side road and see if I can see or hear anything about 'em.' So he turned round. I tell you I felt real bad; I couldn't think anyway in the world what I did with them letters, and I see he was worried to death. After we got to the house and Aunt Simons was fixing herself upstairs, he drove up with Joe.

"'Sally,' says he, 'do look over your pockets again fer them letters; I expect there was a $300 check in one of them, and we can't afford to lose it.' I was just ready to cry, I tell you, but I overlooked the pockets again; but they wan't there, and he said there wasn't any sign or hearin' of 'em on the road. I felt as though I should give up, when he turned and went ont of the door, but just as he swung the gate to he hollered out:

"'Sally! Sally!' and I run. 'I cave!' says he, laughing; 'here they be in my own pocket; you give 'em to me.'

"Sure enough I did, but he put 'em into a pocket he didn't use for letters ordinarily, so he never looked there; and there wan't no check at all in any one of 'em.

"I guess you was mad?" queried Miss Patty.

"Well, I was a little stirred up, I don't deny; I sat right down and cried quite a spell."

"Wan't that real mean?" Mrs. Peck asked of the audience with a tone of fine scorn.

"Did thee wish then thee'd never seen thy husband?" asked Aunt Marcia to Sally.

The anxious face flushed and the sad eyes sparkled.

"Aunt Marcia, I shouldn't know how to live without Tom any way in this mortal world!" and the clear voice broke down as if the thought of such a contingency was too much.

Aunt Marcia Smiled.

"I expect there is faults in all human creatures. 'Male and female created He them,' though; and we can't set out greatly to better the Lord's plans. We really couldn't get along, thee knows without men folks, and they could not without us; but I expect if thee could hear them talk among themselves, Miss Patty, thee would hear, quite frequent, 'Just like a woman.'"

Miss Patty could not deny it.

☞ READ THE VERDICTS:

July 26th, 1882.

We, the undersigned, farmers of Alpine, Utah Co., having this day witnessed the operation of the Osborne Twine Binder, in Wheat and Oats, do affirm that it did the most perfect work we ever saw done by any Self-Binder. The cutting was absolutely clean and the grain was tightly bound.

We do not see that any imperfection exists in this machine.

ALPINE, Utah, July 26, 1882.

We proposed to D. M. Osborne & Co., that if they could, by actual field trial, demonstrate to our entire satisfaction that their Twine Binder would do better work and tighter binding than the Wood or McCormick Binders are doing, then we would purchase an Osborne.

This proposition was readily accepted by D. M. Osborne & Co., and we are pleased to state that their Machine has demonstrated its superiority to our fullest satisfaction and we have purchased an Osborne through L. P. Lund, Agent at Pleasant Grove.

C. M. BECK,
W. T. BROWN,
HYRUM HEALY,
J. S. BECK.

At the trial above mentioned three Osborne Binders were sold on the field, two of which were purchased by parties who had taken McCormick Binders on their merits, and condemned them on account of the very bad work performed.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH,
July 24th, 1882.

We started our Osborne Twine Binder to-day in heavy oats on the farm of Fredk. Reich, and after testing it thoroughly we find it without a single defect. The cutting is clean, binding tight, and the knot perfect. It does the best work we ever saw.

B. ADAMS,
DANL. ADAMS.

We witnessed the working of the Osborne Binder above referred to, and freely bear testimony that we never saw its equal. The bundles are tightly bound and every knot perfect.

I have twenty-eight positive orders for Osborne Binders, and prospect for more. The whole troop of other binders set on fire, and don't you forget it. Do not fail to supply my orders.

LEE GOETSCHINS.

The following telegram was received by Farr Bros., agents of Osborne Machines at Ogden:

COLLINSTON, Utah,
July 26, 1882.

Osborne Twine Binder grand success. Twelve acres cut and no bundles missed.

C. W. ORTH.

COLLINSTON, Utah,
July 26, 1882.

We have cut and bound about twelve acres of heavy rye with our Osborne Twine Binder, and during all this time it did not miss a bundle. The cutting, elevating and binding are without defect. Our neighbors who have seen it work say they would have no other machine.

WM. TWITCHELL,
HARRY G. JEMMETT.

WILLARD, Box Elder Co,
Utah, July 28th, 1882.

My Osborne Twine Binder started to-day in heavy green wheat. It works to my entire satisfaction and more that fills the warranty.

PETER A. NEBEKER.

"We have seen Mr. Nebeker's binder work and fully indorse his statement, we could not ask for anything better.

CHERRY CREEK, Oneida Co.,
Idaho, July 27th, 1882.

I am well pleased with the work done by my Osborne Twine Binder and can honestly recommend it to the farmers of Idaho.

BISHOP J. D. JONES.

After thoroughly examining the work done by Twitchell & Jemmett's Osborne Binder, we cannot speak of it in too high terms. It does not miss a bundle and is a complete success.

Our Osborne Binder works to perfection. We never saw its equal.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, dissipation, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and often cause it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often restores the growth; and always surely restores its color, when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thin, brashy, weak or sickly hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and stabilished; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hairs resume their original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions, diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.
