

THE ONLY PEACE WORTH HAVING

It is That Which Comes to the
Just Man Armed. Says
Mr. Roosevelt.

HAS SMALL USE FOR RICH MEN

We Are a Good Many Thousand Years
Short of the Millennium—Tribute
To American Mothers.

Washington, May 2.—President Roosevelt in an address at the unveiling of the statue of Gen. George B. McClellan by the Society of the Army of the Potomac today, characterized as weakness the desire for peace unless it could be obtained on the right terms. He would have none of the so-called peace if it were merely "another name for self-indulgence, for sloth, for timidity, for the avoidance of duty."

The man who would do the best for the country in peace, the president declared, is the man who at need will do well in war.

THE PEACE TO SEEK.

"Seek the peace that comes to the just man armed," said Mr. Roosevelt, "who will dare to defend his rights if the need should arise. Seek the peace granted to him who will wrong no man and will not submit to wrong in return. Seek the peace that comes to us as the peace of righteousness, the peace of justice. Ask peace by your deeds and your powers, want you in asking it, and do not put yourself in the position to crave it as something to be granted or withheld at the whim of another."

LIFE TO BE AVOIDED.

"If there is another thing which we should avoid, it is the teaching of those who would reinforce the lower promptings of our hearts and so teach us to seek only a life of effortless ease, of mere material comfort. The material development of this country, of which we have a right to be proud, provided we keep our pride rational and our ambition sane, brings with it certain great dangers; and one of those dangers is the confounding of means and ends. Material development means nothing to a nation as an end in itself. If America is to stand simply for the accumulation of what tells for comfort and luxury, it will stand for little more than the vision of the ages. America will stand for much, provided only that it treats material comfort, material luxury, and the means for acquiring such, as the foundation on which to build the real life, the life of spiritual and moral effort and achievement."

THE RICH MAN.

"The rich man who has done nothing but accumulate riches is entitled to but the scantiest consideration; to the men of real power of discernment he is an object rather of contempt than of envy. The test of a fortune should be twofold—how it was earned and how it is spent. It is with the nation as it is with the individual. Looking back through history, the nation that we represent is invariably the nation that struggled, the nation that strove toward a high ideal, the nation that recognized in an obstacle something to be overcome and not something to be shirked."

WHAT THE NATION IS.

"The nation is but the aggregate of the individuals, and what is true of the individual is true of the nation. The man renders but a poor service to nation or to individual who preaches rest, ease and absence of endeavor, as what that nation or that individual should strive after. Both you men who fought in blue and you others who fought in gray, as you look back in your lives, through the years that have passed, what is it in these years that you must glory in? The times of ease, the times of fairness, the times when everything went smoothly with you? Of course not, because you are men, because you are moved by the spirit of men. What you glory in, what you hope to hand down as undying memories to your children, are the things that were done in the days that brought little pleasure, with them save the grim consciousness of having done each man his duty as his duty needed to be done.

SOLDIERS OF THE SIXTIES.

"Because in those years you had it in you dauntlessly to do your share in the work allotted to you, your children and your children's children rise up and call you blessed. What among you now would barter the memories of the black years from '61 to '65 for any gift that could be given? Not a man among you. You have won the right to feel a pride that none of your countrymen can feel, and you won the right because you sought not the path of ease, but the path of rough, disagreeable, irksome and dangerous duty."

FAR FROM THE MILLENIUM.

The president said that we are yet a good many thousand years short of the millennium, and our business is to do our own duty and teach our children to do their duty in a rough workaday world. "And," he said, "we can do that duty by fine phrases."

PRaises GEN. McCLELLAN.

There was one person in this country, he declared, he put ahead of the soldier—the really good woman, the good wife and mother who has done her full duty to the nation.

"She often has a pretty hard time, yet the woman who with labor and anxiety brings up her children is blessed among women, blessed among men. I do not play her in the least, I respect and admire her and hold her worthy of admiration and honor. The selfish creature, man and woman, who reaches old age, having achieved ease by shirking duty, is to be heartily despised and not envied. Our admiration is reserved for him or for her who has done the real work which makes the next generation able in its turn to do its work in the country."

"WEAK GOOD NATURE."

Mr. Roosevelt criticized "a weak good nature, incapable of righteous wrath," saying it was almost as unfortunate an attribute for a citizen as willingness to do wrong.

AMERICA'S DUTY.

"America must rise level to the ideals of the founders of the nation when they started this mighty republic on the road to self-government. These ideals were to found here a government of the people, by the people, where no one man should wrong his brother, where the nation should wrong no outsider, and should be able to resist aggression from without. I hope to see this nation play an ever-growing part in the world's affairs. It cannot play that part unless it is willing to accept the responsibilities that go with it."

MUST STRIVE FOR IDEALS.

"We cannot do our first and primary duty at home within our own borders unless we strive measurably to realize certain ideals. By this, I do not mean merely to talk about them at Fourth of July celebrations to speak them and applaud the speeches, then go home and have neither speaker nor hearer practice what thus virtually has been preached. We should say and do only what we believe in. And having said it, and having applauded it when said, we should try to put it into practice."

SPIRIT OF EQUALITY.

"When we speak of liberty, when we praise it, let us try to see that in actual practice we achieve it. When we speak of fraternity, of brotherhood, let us answer each for himself, the qualities that make for brotherhood, for fraternity. When we speak of equality, let us try to realize in the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, who pointed out that there was of course a certain sense in which men are not equal, and cannot be equal, but who realized by his life and his deeds the profound truth, that in the larger sense, in the real, the all-important sense, there can and must be an equality among our fellow-citizens. It is an equality of rights before the law; a measurable equality of opportunity, so far as we can secure it for each man, and in that sense there is in him without harming his fellows, and without blinding from his fellows, and finally and most important, it is that equality which we should prize above all else; the equality of self-respect and of mutual respect among each and all of our citizens."

PRaises GEN. McCLELLAN.

President Roosevelt began his address by giving generous praise to Gen. George B. McClellan, of whom the heroic sentimentalist statue today was unveiled under the direction of the Army of the Potomac. McClellan, he said, had commanded in some of the most important engagements of the Civil war, linking his name with the mighty memories of the conflict. The president extended the greetings of the nation to Mrs. McClellan, widow of Gen. McClellan, and her family. He praised the real work which makes the nation to Washington, and thanked the committee for having chosen a noted sculptor to do the work.

He was returning from a railroad depot, where he had gone to check his trunk, when he was attacked.

RHEUMATISM.

When pains or irritation exist on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment gives prompt relief. E. W. Sullivan, Prop., Sullivan House, El Reno, O. T., writes June 3, 1902: "I take pleasure in recommending Ballard's Snow Liniment to all who are afflicted with rheumatism. It is the only remedy I have found that gives me such prompt relief. I am, and I believe you are, a sufferer from rheumatism. I have used your liniment and I feel better than I have for many years. I am, and I believe you are, a sufferer from rheumatism. THREATENED TO KILL ALL WHO TESTIFIED AGAINST HIM

San Francisco, May 2.—"I'll kill every witness who testified against me, if I have to swing for it." This was Frank Morgan's parting remark to Deputy Marshal Towle, when he was placed in a cell in the federal building this morning after a jury in the United States court had adjudged him guilty of stealing a special delivery letter.

For the sake of a meagre $1 bill, which was inclosed in the stolen letter, Morgan will spend from one to five years of his life in the state penitentiary. Judge De Haven pronounced sentence in his case on Saturday morning.

EMBEZZLER CHISHOLM'S DEFENSE IS INSANITY.

Birmingham, Ala., May 2.—The prosecution rested its case today in the trial of Alexander R. Chisholm, formerly paying teller of the First National bank, under indictment for embezzlement of $100,000 from the bank, which was alleged to have been lost in cotton speculation.

The defense began by placing the mother of the defendant upon the stand. She testified she was a great-granddaughter of the late Chief Justice John Rutledge, and that the latter became insane during the last year of his life; also that Justice Rutledge had a grandson in Charleston, S. C., who became mentally unbalanced and had a man for setting fire to houses. She swore that prior to August, 1905, when the defendant had typhoid fever, he had been of a bright, cheerful nature, but since that time had been morose. Since his first trial, last fall, the family had sent him to the state insane hospital for treatment, but were afraid to allow him to venture away from home.

A Warning.

To feel tired after exertion is one thing; to feel tired before exertion is another. Don't say the latter is laziness—it isn't, but it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, is running down, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It's a warning, too—and sufferers should begin taking Hood's at once. Buy a bottle today.

Woman's Nightmare

No woman's happiness can be complete without children; it is her nature to love and want them as much so as it is to love the beautiful and pure. The critical ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass, however, is so fraught with dread, pain, suffering and danger, that the very thought of it fills her with apprehension and horror. There is no necessity for the reproduction of life to be either painful or dangerous. The use of Mother's Friend so prepares the system for the coming event that it is safely passed without any danger. This great and wonderful remedy is always applied externally, and has carried thousands of women through the trying crisis without suffering. And for a book containing information of priceless value to all expectant mothers. The Bradford Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga.
