The usual bustle and excitement attending the eve of a political battle are prevalent to-day. Candidates are industriously working for their personal interests, politicians are giving instructions to their follower, and pamphlets setting forth the claims of the nominees are scattered broadcast through the city. James O'Brien has an unthustastic troupe in every ward, and feels confident of being elected to the mayoralty. He hopes for 20,000 msjority. Many of his adherents claim that he has been promised a large Republican vote. A The usual bustle and excitem been distributed in his name among the laboring men in the up-town wards. The enthusiasm for him on the East ede has occasioned a report that a preconcerted attack will be made upon the Havemeyer boxes to-morrow. A rumor was spread to-day that Havemeyer had withdrawn, and it was a theme or universal remark, but it proved entirely unfounded. Tammany Hall is crowded with politicians enthusiastic for Lawrence. In betting O'Brien is the favorite, with Havemeyer close to him, Lawrence far behind. The contest for governer excites the greatest interest, and the betting is nearly two to one on Dix.
