Committeeg are at work in all parts of the city and all sorts of schemes are being devised looking to the accomplishment of the grand result. Even in districts where the outlook was anything hut bright, new hope has sprung up and the prediction is now made that not one school in the city will be required to close for lack of funds. The Commercial club is discussing the raising of a general fund to be applied to schools within the poorer districts, and it is thought that in this

WESTERN ARMS BURGLARIZED

Burglars made a pretty rich haul at he Western Arms Sporting Goods store on East Temple street last night. The obbers removed a pane of glass from a rear window and with an iron bar, siolen from some ireplement house, pried the steel bars from the window. They had evidently laid their plans and had decided just what they would take. After entering from the rear, they went to a show case near the front of the revolvers. Nothing else in the place was disturbed and the thieves' departure was as quiet as their appearance According to the list at the police station, the burglars secured two automatic revolvers, 13 fine Colt's revolvers and one Smith & Wesson.

The robbers had probably waited until the night watchman had made his rounds and gone to a different part of the block before they broke the winside to watch and prevent a surprise the stock. Miss Emma Ramsey and Brother Lewis Arrive From Europe.

Miss Emma Ramsey of Provo reurned this morning, from a three and half years' absence in Europe where the has been diligently pursuing her musical studies, and returns home, not merely a vocalist, but a well rounded musician, thoroughly grounded in the scientific as well as the purely artistic departments of her profession. Miss Ramsey will rest quietly for two or three weeks visiting with friends in this city and Provo, and will then show the public to what good purpose she has been devoting her time while abroad. Prof. J. J. McClellan will be Miss Ramsey's manager while she remains here, and in his abilities as a concert conductor she has justly the greatest confidence. She, however, rather exto Europe as there are concert enthe has made such an excellent impres

Miss Ramsey studied piano in this country with Profs. She stud ied harmony under Herr Lebengott and plane in the Berlin conversatory Then the fair student went to Paris, where she studied vocally under Mons Archainbeaud of the French academy 30 it will be seen that Miss Ramsey has had the best of instruction in all branches of music, and is well equipped o take a professorship in any Ameri-an institution. Her voice is a dra-natic soprano with a range of nearly hree octaves, her lowest note being I she has a wide acquaintance with the nusical classics.

While in New York, Miss Ramsey sang for Mesers. Liebling and Mumford of the Musical Courier—both critics well country, and they expressed themselves delighted with her voice. In Chicago, Miss Ramsey sang in concert in Kent Theater, under the auspices of Prof. Bartlett Jones of Chicago univer-sity, and was very handsomely received Miss Ramsey remarked this noon, that the art of the United States was rapid-ly rising to the status obtained in Europe, but for some years yet, it would be necessary for American students to study abroad in order to acquire that polish that can come only from a thoroughly musical atmosphere. Moreover, there are specialties in the varus branches of the profession that can only be profitably studied by residence in foreign musical circles. Miss Ramsey attended the Gewandhaus concerts in Leipsig, all of the great operatic, concert and orchestra performances in the German capital; and these supplementgiven this fortunate young woman a most enviable equipment for her life's work. Miss Ramsey has a charming manner that is the most engaging because unaffected by any assumption of affectation; or in the vernacular of the lay, she does not put on any airs, will make of her a greater favorite with the public. Her many friends in this state will be very glad when the time omes when she is to appear before a ocal public.

Miss Ramsey is accompanied by her brother Lewis, who has been studying art in Paris for the past two years. Several of his brush productions have been accepted by the St. Julien acadand are said to be works of high perit. Mr. and Miss Ramsey go to rovo tonight.

ELDER KIMBALL'S ADDRESS. Hon. J. G. Kimball then addressed the humorous vein, the speaker referred to the days when he had courted the granddaughter of Patriarch Smith, and expressed his satisfaction at the thought that not all of us are talkers. If we had been, there would have been no anals constructed, no railroads built no libraries founded. John S. Smith was a worker; for 94 years he has worked steadily, without interruption till this day, and he is still working. He is a man of iron will, so keen in argu-ment that the speaker admitted area larger than the entire coal region his own willingness to quit in any argument with the Patriarch. nith was born in Worcestershire, England, March 10, 1809. He was married to Jane Waddley in 1838. In the year 1840, through the preaching of Prest. Wilford Woodruff, he and his wife were baptized. In one year he came with his family to Nauvoo, became familiar with the Prophet and was a member of the Nauvoo legion.

Brother John S. Smith cannot be considered an educated man, as we now speak of the higher education, yet there are no young men that have had the manual training that this good man has experienced. He has had to turn his hands to a thousand and one things nd work them out. Like the Saviour, his Master, he has earned obedience through the things which he has suffered. He has an indomitable will and cannot be tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine, but knows the Shepherd's voice and a stranger he will not follow. Whenever the servants of the Lord speak he sub-mits like a willing child.

If enterprises need assistance or tem-oles are to be dedicated, he is among he first to subscribe when approached by his brethren. This good man before you has witnessed the fulfillment of Proverbs, third chapter, 9-10 verses: "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all their increase.
